EDITOR'S NOTE

The first issue of the Alumni Record was published in 1905, under the able editorship of E. P. Humphrey, '85. A second edition was published in 1915, edited by the president. It has been thought that since the present year is the seventy fifth anniversary of the founding of the college, it would be especially fitting to publish another edition, giving the principal addresses of the celebration, and bringing the record of the classes down to date. It is regretted that the excellent anniversary address of Bishop Homer Stuntz is not available for publication.

We regret the incomplete nature of the record of our graduates. This is due to the fact that in spite of several letters sent out no replies from some graduates were received. No book of this kind can be accurate without the co-operation of those whom it seeks to serve. If our graduates would realize that there are classmates and former teachers who are interested in them, and any news is better than no news, the task of the editor would be greatly simplified. It is a difficult task, also, to keep the correct addresses of graduates, as very few ever notify the college office of a change of residence. It takes a large amount of effort to learn the whereabouts of many of them, labor and time which could be saved by a little thoughtful consideration.

Anyone who notices errors, or can supply missing addresses, either of graduates or former students, will confer a great favor by writing the college office. We would especially call attention to the fact that this edition of the record contains the addresses of former students as far as known. It would be a great satisfaction to us to have this list extended by additional names being sent in by any who know the whereabouts of others.

SAMUEL PLANTZ

BRIEF SKETCHES OF THE EARLY HISTORY AT LAWRENCE UNIVERSITY

By William H. Sampson
First Principal of Lawrence Institute

Born, as was Methodism, in a University, it is no marvel that her sons should be ambitious to maintain her worthy origin, and labor to exalt her everywhere to a noble destiny in all departments of letters, and the sciences. It is gratifying to know that in the march of our western civilization her children have kept pace with the demand to furnish educational facilities for the population. It is difficult to estimate the importance of this work in a republic like ours where the sovereignty is vested in the people and the perpetuity of our civil and religious institutions depends on virtue and intelligence. Neither is it a trifle to determine where the location of our literary and scientific foundations will be the most serviceable to the public in the settlement of a new country. There are always enough to enlighten Providence in the matter and sometimes these selfish purposes are overruled by one whose omniscience scans the future and plans in spite of human frailty. For several years before a providential opening seemed to occur for commencing such an enterprise in Wisconsin under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal church, there was a prayerful anxiety on this subject; several of us had talked the matter over but could fix on no definite plan or location. We concluded that a college for both male and female students where each and all should be entitled to equal educational advantages was a desideratum. Wisconsin was included in the Rock River Conference in 1844 when I was appointed to the Green Bay District which extended from Whitewater to Green Bay, and from Sheboygan to Portage City. About this time the necessity of forming a Wisconsin Conference began to be discussed and more particular interest was felt by those designing to remain therein in reference to its educational facilities.

In the spring of 1846 I received the following communication from H. Eugene Eastman, Esq., of Green Bay:

Elder Wm. H. Sampson, Dear Sir: I am in receipt of a letter from a gentleman in Boston, whose name I am not at liberty to disclose, containing the following proposition, which I take the liberty of tendering to you, to be submitted to your annual Conference, should you see fit to do so: "If there is any certainty of a vigorous co-operation of any other body, lay or clerical, I should be willing to put such a sum of money in the hands of Trustees as placed at interest will in ten years amount to $10,000, and also give (provided there should be no failure in case of my death) the sum of One Thousand Dollars yearly for ten years toward securing a competent salary to such instructors as may be required, or if necessary, I will pay the $10,000 in cash now to secure the desired object. But all this is founded on the expectation of a similar sum from other quarters. I should have a high opinion of the adaptation of the principles of the Methodists to the people of the west, and I think that from all that I can learn, that their institutions are carried on with more vigor, and diffuse more good with the same means than any others. It seems to be decided by experience that all literary institutions must be controlled by some sect and efforts to prevent this have often blasted their usefulness. I wish you to keep this to yourself as far as possible, and at any rate keep my name out of view."

This proposition, it is proper to add, is for the establishing an institution of learning at or near DePere, Brown County, which appears to be a sine qua non with this gentleman who makes it. Please take the trouble to present the above to your Conference. If there is any reasonable prospect of the Society meeting the same with a similar endowment, inform me of the disposition as soon as possible; meantime, I should be glad to hear your views on the subject. Should you write soon, you will please address to Boston, Massachusetts.

H. Eugene Eastman.

Green Bay, April 17th, 1846.

This communication turned our attention to a location not thought of before. I took this letter to our next Conference, held at Peoria, Illinois. It was given to the Committee on Education and their report recommended that the letter be returned to me with instructions to get the gentleman's name making the proposition and open a correspondence to ascertain what could be done. Before I secured the name from Mr. Eastman or a permit to open a correspondence, Mr. Reeder Smith, then agent for Albion Seminary, of Michigan, applied to Mr. A. A. Lawrence, in Boston, for help in that institution. Mr. Lawrence declined, he told, on the ground that he considered the people in Michigan able to build their own institutions. He informed Mr. Smith of his proposition to start an institution in Wisconsin, and it seems Mr. Smith was for some reason anxious to get away from Michigan, and secured the charge of Mr. Lawrence's proposition made in the foregoing letter to Mr. Eastman, and came to Wisconsin in November or December following. December 28th, 1846, a convention of ministers and laymen gathered in Milwaukee, where the proposition of Mr. Lawrence was presented, and after some discussion a charter was drafted for the Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin, and a committee appointed to proceed to Madison, the Legislature being in session, and secure the passage of the Charter. My family resided at Fond du Lac, and after returning there, I had to attend a quarterly meeting at Lake Maria, hence I did not reach Madison till the following week. Mr. Smith had preceeded me and got the Charter before the House, and when I arrived they told me they designed to kill the bill when it came up again. Having friends in both branches I secured an interest in favor of the bill and it finally passed and was signed by Governor Dodge, Jandary 17th, 1847. The next thing was to secure a suitable location. There were several who were a few dollars anxious to direct Providence in this work. Mr. Smith purchased a tract of land ostensibly for Mr. Lawrence from Hon. John F. Merade, where Appleton now stands. In the contract Mr. Smith secured a donation of thirty-one acres on condition the Institute should be located at the place, and George W. Lawe, Esq., proposed to donate thirty-one acres more. There were propositions from others, but the Board of Trustees decided in favor of the present location.

The Trustees named in the Charter were to meet in Fond du Lac in June, I think, 1847, or sometime within the period allowed by the Charter for organizing, but a quorum failing to appear we adjourned to meet in September, I think the 5th, when a quorum being present, a permanent organization was effected by the election of the following officers, to-wit: Hon. M. C. Darling, President; Hon. N. P. Tallmadge, 1st Vice President; Henry S. Baird, Esq., 2nd Vice President; Hon. Morgan L. Martin, Treasurer; and Wm. H. Sampson, Secretary.

During the year many letters were written and the necessary amount of gassing was done east and west in order to bring "such a noble and benevolent enterprise" into notoriety, and especially to magnify the disinterestedness of certain individuals, who condescended to attend to the wants of the uneducated and uncivilized west with so much of self sacrifice.

Subscriptions were solicited to meet the conditions of Mr. Lawrence's donation. Mr. Samuel Appleton donated $10,000 for a Library Fund, the interest only to be used, and among the other principle contributors were Hon. M. L. Martin, Hon. Charles Durkee, Hon. M. L. Darling, Rev. S. Fisk, and others, and at our first annual meeting of the Board in Fond du Lac, August 9th, 1848, we had promises sufficient to consider the enterprise secured beyond a doubt. Wm. H. Sampson was elected Principal and was to aid the Agent till the school opened, and Reeder Smith was elected Agent, assuring the Board that he would have the building ready to open the school during the following November or December.

My family resided in Fond du Lac, and as there was no place for them at Grand Chute, except the forest, I could not take them to the city till I built a shanty to shelter them.

The Agent arranged with Col. Henry L. Blood to furnish the bill of timber and draw the lumber to the spot for the Preparatory Building, and then started for Boston, the only place at that early day worth noticing. I arranged matters at home, packed my trunk, and the 7th of September, 1848, left for the scene of operations. I took the steamer Manchester, the same they used to draw over the sandbar at Taychudah with a yoke of stags, arrived at Neenah about noon, secured a passage alone in an Indian dugout to the Grand Chute, and took lodgings in a shanty hotel, about one mile south of west from the present court house, kept by Mr. Thurber, the nearest house to the place of business.

On the 8th of September I began to cut away the thick underbrush and soon had a road cleared from the old Indian trail on the river bank to the block on which Mr. Brewster's beautiful residence now stands (Block 3, 2nd Ward). I cleared off the brush, and the necessary preparations were made for the erection of the building in the center of that block. Col. Blood soon had a bill of timber, as per Agent's order, cut a road through the dense forest to Duck Creek, where the agent had engaged the lumber, employed teams, and soon was doing "land office" business; a towering pile of lumber was on the ground. The Agent had let the contract of putting up the building to Wm. H. McGregor, of Sheboygan, and he sent John P. Parish and Mr. Blake, who came in October or November with their families, erected shanties, and went to work. In consequence of sickness in my family I was not able to move into my shanty till January 6th, 1849.

The Agent remained east till the latter part of February, and on his arrival went into city building, speculation, double entry bookkeeping, changed the plans for the college building till, if I recollect, Col. Blood furnished three bills of timber, and the frame of the building was not raised till the third day of July following. This was a year of new and rare experiences with us westerners in school enterprises, principalships, agencies, etc., and some of us became thoroughly disgusted with the whole concern; but we had enlisted and it was considered cowardly to back out and impolitic to speak a discouraging word. After the building was raised the Agent hastened to the seat of the Wisconsin Conference, which convened that year at Platteville, June 27th, to arrange for a visiting committee that should meet his approval, which he secured without opposition. At the annual meeting of the Joint Board, which met August 8th, 1849, the President appointed these visitors Chairmen of the principle committees, and before the meeting closed the Agent seemed anxious to be delivered from the tender mercies of his friends. Against his remonstrances, and in spite of them, Wm. H. Sampson was appointed Financial Agent and re-appointed Principal of the Preparatory Department of the Lawrence University. The former Agent was as much disgusted with this arrangement as was the newly elected, and one who heard him, said he declared he would not rest till he saw the building shoved to the bank and down into the river. It was now die Sampson or slay the lion. The visitors from the Conference had lost heart on account of the former management, the panic spread through the Conference, and from most, interest in the enterprise seemed to have fled. The former Agent claimed he had kept his books in "Double Entry," but it was a new system that no one else could honestly solve according to his wishes.

Under these embarrassments the new appointee entered upon his duties, but found many true, warm, sympathizing friends ready to encourage and help to the extent of their ability. Funds were needed, confidence in the enterprise was shaken and difficulties in every direction stared the Board in the face. To the Trustees and friends of the enterprise in Appleton the present and future of the Lawrence University were not very promising at that time. They kept their own secrets, put the best side out, and did their best. The building was enclosed, the plastering, inside woodwork, and painting were so far done that school opened November 12th, 1849, with Wm. H. Sampson, Principal; R. O. Kellogg, A. B., Professor of Languages; James M. Phinney, Professor of Mathematics, and Miss Emeline M. Crooker, Preceptress and Teacher in Music. The accommodations were not the most convenient, nor the surroundings the most agreeable. None present today would envy the places occupied or the wages paid for the services rendered; but those teachers were as untiring and energetic in their work as if millions had been offered as their reward.

The school early gained a reputation for thoroughness and moral discipline which was not surpassed by any school in Wisconsin, if, indeed, in the west, and I think it has kept pace with the rising reputation of other schools to the present time. To pay debts, pay teachers, and make necessary improvements with all the embarrassments that were thrown around us was no small task. Having houses to build, our families and a share of the students to provide for in a new place where nearly everything must be imported required labor. Rev. H. R. Colman was Steward, and Col. H. L. Blood was Treasurer, and the demands upon them were heavy; but nobly did they meet them. I spent many sleepless nights in planning to meet the exigencies of the hour. In order to carry forward the work I found it necessary to dispose of my property in the city of Fond du Lac where I owned a dwelling, two lots and thirty acres of land, also one hundred and twenty acres of timber land two miles north on the west side of the lake, all now worth seventy-five to one hundred thousand dollars. As money was close at the time I had to sell at a great sacrifice; but I had risked all, reputation and property, in the success of the Lawrence University and I saw no other way to pass the crisis upon us at that time .

We pushed forward our improvements as fast as our means would allow till my health began to yield to the pressure and I was obliged to notify the Board that I should close my service as their Agent at their annual meeting. I gave this notice to the Executive Board early in the spring and we applied our best energies and skill till the annual meeting, which convened June 6th, 1851. During the session Rev. Davis W. Clarke, A. M., since Bishop, was elected President; Rev. R. O. Kellogg, A. B., Professor of Ancient Languages; Miss E. M. Crooker, Preceptress; and Miss L. Amelia Dayton, Teacher of Modern Languages. Professor Phinney declined serving the Board longer as teacher of Mathematics, and the place was left to be filled by the executive Board. Col. Blood was re-elected Treasurer, and Rev. David Brooks, Agent. Brother Clarke declined to accept the position and Professor Kellogg was placed in charge. Professor J. Brooks taught the Mathematics; Oscar F. Dana, Esq., was elected Professor of Greek Language and Literature, but declined to serve, so Professors Kellogg and Brooks and Misses Crooker and Dayton did the teaching for the year, and the catalogue for the year gave an attendance of ninety-eight.

Matters had become badly complicated with Mr. Lawrence by the first Agent's transactions, and at the meeting of the Board which convened June 2nd, 1852, it was deemed necessary to send a commission to explain, harmonize and settle up these matters. Wm. H. Sampson was deputized, and with Power of Attorney to act for the Board, he went to Boston and amicably adjusted all matters between Mr. Lawrence and the Board so far as Mr. Lawrence, himself, was concerned. Mr. Lawrence has given about $30,000 in all.

The labors and responsibilities of Professor Kellogg were too severe for his health and he was granted leave of absence at the annual meeting till he should sufficiently recover to return and do his work. Mr. Adin Brooks was employed to teach his class and the supervision of the school was committed temporarily to Professor Jabez Brooks. Miss Crooker was retained as preceptress and Teacher of Music. The school did not succeed in meeting the expectations of the Executive Board and I was sent for to return to my former position. I got a release from my pastoral charge, returned to the school, and at an extra meeting of the Joint Board, which convened September 1st, 1852, was re-elected Principal. Rev. Edward Cooke was elected President, to take charge as soon as he could make arrangements to come, provided he accepted the situation. Rev. J. S. Prescott was elected Agent; Col. H. L. Blood, Treasurer, and they were authorized to make arrangements, procure materials and proceed to erect the main college building. Professor Brooks took umbrage at my re-election, resigned his place as Professor of Mathematics, and with his brother, Mr. Adin Brooks, started an opposition school, which continued through a part of the second term and ceased for want of patronage. The third catalogue numbers eighty-four students.

President Cooke arrived in early summer and assisted at the close of the term. Professor Kellogg's health had recovered so that he returned to his place when Professor Brooks left, and, in spite of opposition, we closed the year with inceasing encouragement.

The annual meeting of the Joint Board convened June 29th, 1853. President Cooke gave his inaugural and was duly installed as the first President of the Faculty in the Lawrence University.

The corner stone of our college building was laid by Dr. M. C. Darling, President of the Board of Trustees, and an able address was delivered on the occasion by Rev. Alfred Brunson, A.M. The faculty for this year was organized as follows: Rev. Edward Cooke, A. M., President; Rev. R. O. Kellogg, A. M., Professor of Ancient Languages and Literature; Rev. Wm. H. Sampson, Teacher in Mathematics and English; Miss L. Amelia Dayton, Preceptress and Teacher of Modern Languages; Miss Jane I. Adams, Teacher in Music; Miss Lucy A. Weston, Teacher in Primary Department; Rev. J. S. Prescott, Agent; Col. Blood, Resident Agent and Treasurer; Rev. Henry Requa, Agent for Indian Department. Confidence in the financial management of the enterprise was measurably restored.

Work progressed on the college building but the means for its completion came in slowly. Mr. Samuel Appleton, of Boston, after whom the city was named, transferred $10,000 in stocks to the University, the principle to be held inviolate, the income to be invested in a Library, and the scholarships which were sold were being paid up, the principle of which was to form an endowment fund, the interest to be paid to the faculty.

As was very natural, President Cooke was in a great hurry to have the new building completed, and, in spite of remonstrances, he secured the consent of a majority of the Board present to an appropriation of some $15,000 of the scholarship fund to finish off the main building, and this amount has never been replaced. The fact got out and I think it was very prejudicial to the scholarship fund which I think to a very great extent otherwise might have been collected. The fourth catalogue showed an attendance during the year of one hundred and ninety-six students. The attendance was so full that some one started a scheme to continue building and add two dormitory buildings, each one hundred and twenty feet by forty feet on the ground, and three stories high. The Executive Board passed resolutions to do this, but the funds were not furnished, and though the resolutions stand firm on the records today, the dormitories remain unbuilt. At the annual meeting in 1854 the Board of Trustees elected a Faculty to meet the wants of college classes, and the catalogue for that year gives the names of twenty--eight Freshmen and four Sophomores, and an attendance in both college and preparatory departments during the year of 333.

The Lawrence University was started on the plan of the co-education of sexes, giving to each student the opportunity of competing for any honor conferred by the University and of enjoying that honor when justly earned. Dr. Cooke seemed to think that the dignity of a college Faculty was somewhat compromised by giving the ladies a place on the same page with the gentlemen, and practically the original design was not carried out by him except in the class recitations. There was a male and female department for the Faculty, for the College and for the Preparatory students in the catalogue and in the commencement exercises. Dr. Mason followed the precedent set by his illustrious predecessor, and not till 1865, when Dr. Steele assumed the duties of President, did we have a man of sufficient progress and courage to carry out the original design of the founders of the Lawrence University.

The first catalogue published by President Steele gives the Faculty on the same page, the male and female graduates are published together, but the undergraduates are separated, though he has the courage to give them their proper class cognomens, Freshmen, Sophomore, etc., instead of First, Second, etc., years for the ladies. To keep the peace, I suppose, he gave Valedictory adresses to male and female. But the second year he had received his D. D., and he gave the Latin Salutatory to Phebe D. Bullock, the first time we have full evidence of equal opportunity to compete for college honors by ladies and gentlemen in Lawrence University. Since then he is entirely ruined in the estimation of old fogies.

Those who wish to learn the changes in the faculty and officers of the University in 1854 and subsequently are referred to the published catalogues for the several years.

The Literary Societies removed from their inconvenient quarters in the Preparatory building to their present pleasant rooms in the College where many have spent profitable hours in the arena of mental competition.

The four succeeding were years of prosperity so far as numbers of students in attendance and mental culture were concerned, but the finances fell behind, and in spite of all the Board could do the expenses of the school exceeded the income; hence funds were necessarily used from the capital that should have been kept sacred and only the interest of it used. At the annual meeting of the Board in 1855 the $15,000 used from the scholarship fund was secured by mortgage on the college building, and so far as I am informed there has never been any foreclosure. It is due to Col. Blood to say here that his financial management in the erection of our college building is worthy of all praise. The expense of its entire structure was less than $30,000.

On the night of the first Sabbath in January, 1857, the Preparatory building, which at the time was occupied by the lady students, was consumed by fire by which the ladies have been greatly inconvenienced ever since. It is due to the ladies that a commodious and convenient building should be speedily erected for their occupancy.

July 1st, 1857, the first graduating class, seven in number, received their diplomas from President Cooke and went out to battle for the right.

At the anual meeting of the Board in 1858 I resigned my position as Adjunct Professor of Mathematics and my labors closed as an instructor in Lawrence University. I trust you will pardon any appearance of egotism in these imperfect sketches as my life was identified with all the interests of our University, its prosperity and adversity, its triumphs and its failures from its incipiency to the time I left.

The 30th of June, 1858, was an eventful day in the history of Lawrence University, as the Board by a majority of those present voted to give its first Agent $7,300 credit on its records to get rid of him and close up all relations with him. It may have been an expression of gratitude on the part of those who voted for it for the services he rendered to the benighted west on the subject of "Bookkeeping by Double Entry."

Though my efforts may have been feeble, and my sacrifices small, I have the conscious satisfaction of knowing that I gave most conscientiously and honestly the best years of my life, and made my small sacrifices when they were most needed and their application would tell to the best advantage.

Before I close allow me to record my high appreciation of the patient and enduring toils, and repeated sacrifices of the friends of our University during these infantile years of its history.

EARLY HISTORY OF LAWRENCE

By Russell Z. Mason

Second President of Lawrence

Dr. Plantz: In answer to your very polite request for a statement of the principal events that occurred during my administration as President of Lawrence University, I will, in the following narrative, give you the facts as near as I can remember. Of course, it will be proper for me to state that the faculty of instruction, of which I was one—Professor of Natural Science—found itself in 1859 confronted by poverty and bankruptcy. Dr. Cooke, my immediate predecessor, had served it faithfully for some six years until he had satisfied himself that no immediate relief could be expected from its patrons, either in the Church or out of it. Hence he resigned.

2. The trustees were therefore put to the disagreeable necessity of finding a successor to him or of closing the doors of the Institution. The college was young. The country was new. The people of Wisconsin were not rich. To start an institution of that grade in the wilderness was an experiment. Chicago, at that date, had less than a hundred thousand people. Milwaukee was a flourishing village, and the blast furnace and the paper pulp mills, now employing millions of capital, in Appleton and along Fox River, had not then been thought of. The mammoth estates of the Carnagies and the Rockefellers had not then shown the features of a future possibility. But there were a dozen men and women who had been called to their work from different fields to be left without support or employment. There were besides myself, Knox, Blair, Jones, Fox, Davies, Griffith, Pomeroy, Plestcheke and several ladies. Besides this group of a faculty there were between three hundred and four hundred young men and women in the vigorous young state of Wisconsin to be left without the means of a liberal education in the school of their choice. Such was the problem presented to the Trustees of Lawrence University in 1859.

3. They had erected the principal building of the University but at what cost? They had expended every cent of the $50,000.00 which had been gathered by the sale of scholarships. In doing this they had cheapened education and had bankrupted the College Treasury. Not a cent was received for tuition. To conduct an institution of learning requiring an annual expenditure of several thousand dollars and still make it appear respectable in the public eye was what was required. This beat the making of brick without straw. But who shall be held responsible for this state of things? It was certainly the original intention of Mr. Lawrence to give the Institution a creditable origin. He had bought of the Government the site where the college and the town were located, and if his purpose had been realized there would have been, even at that early day sufficient funds to conduct a University of great efficiency. We must attribute the blame for this unfortunate state of affairs to the general management, or rather mis-management, brought about by the estrangement of the agents of the college and trustees. But as all these parties have now gone to their final account we leave them to have assigned to them whatever of praise or blame each deserved. But of one thing we were made, at an early day in the six years of our administration, painfully aware, and that is that Lawrence University owed twenty thousand dollars which had to be paid. We had scrubbed along in our poverty for a year or so till it was evident that our creditors would wait no longer.

4. It was necessary for me as President and representative of the University to take the field. Where was the money to support the faculty and pay the debt of the University to come from? Who in Wisconsin had the money to pay this debt? And then we must not only find the one who had this money but we must find combined in the same individual one disposed to aid so forlorn a scheme as paying off an old debt which somebody else had contracted. It was an almost hopeless task. But now the friends of education in Appleton and vicinity began to show their hand.

5. Such men as Ballard, Adkins, Phinney, Conkeys, P. H. Smith, David Smith and others of Appleton and Payne and Sawyer of Oshkosh took hold bravely and made it possible to overcome our embarrassments. They gave us money and what was better, courage. I was commissioned to go to Boston, the hub of the universe, to hunt for treasure. P. H. Smith, as President of the Northwestern R. R. Co., paid my fare. The great Civil War was then on the point of breaking out. I saw Mr. Lawrence. He still had an affectionate regard for the College as a child of his own creation, and he told me in my first interview that if the finances of the country did not grow any worse—government bonds then 12% below par—he would give us $10,000.00 and he, as executor of the estate of Samuel Appleton, after whom the town was named, gave for endowment of library $10,000.00 more. Then I saw Mr. Lee Chaflin, I think, Ex-Governor of Massachusetts, and he gave us $10,000.00 for endowment purposes. I then came home and raised $10,000.00 more by subscription among the good people of Wisconsin. This was quite a reputable achievment especially when you take into account the fact that it occurred more than forty years ago and before our Carnegies and Rockefellers had distanced the world in piling up their millions.

6. But the debt was paid. The great work of education, characteristic of the age, in which we were engaged, went steadily on. The foundations of the University were laid on the solid granite of an enlightened public confidence.

7. But now we were to face a new series of facts or events as they presented themselves in the history of our country. The secessionists of South Carolina were determined to test the strength of the United States Government and so show their malignity toward everything under the name of abolitionism if nothing more. The guns were leveled and fired on Fort Sumpter. The country was alarmed but resolved. Lawrence University was not slow to declare itself for the Union. A war meeting was called to meet in the College Chapel. I was called to the chair; though not strictly according to my ecclesiastical training and relations I claim the honor of making the first war speech that was made in the community if not in that state. There were other speeches made that evening from Dr. Davis, J. M. Phinney, Professor Pomeroy. These speeches all bore fruit. Enlistments were numerous. Prof. Pletschke and Prof. Pomeroy both enlisted that evening and both died in the army. Prof. Pomeroy was a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point. Detractors may call him a martinet but the records show that he was a patriot.

8. In every subsequent call of President Lincoln for volunteers some of our young men enlisted. I think in one case an entire class, which if I remember rightly, was the class that would have graduated in 1864. Naturally the citizens of Appleton were not backward in this work. We remember Jewette and Marston and Ryan among what might be called a multitude. But I think I run no risk of a failure when I challenge any similar institution in the country to show a greater per cent of its pupils and graduates and faculty who responded to the call for men in the proclamations of President Lincoln and Governor Randall. Democrats and Republicans were alike on the qui vive. Many of us had young families but that was not allowed to cut much figure.

9. The animus of the college government was not simply authorative or arbitrary but it aimed to teach the student the art of self control. He was taught to maintain for himself, self respect, and that kind of self respect that refused to disobey the law. The students and faculty were always on good terms with each other. What was desired by one was desired by the other. We think this an essential part of a liberal education.

10. This fact may be mentioned as an illustration of the prevailing temper and spirit, politically, of the institution, that is that the Hon. Fred Douglas, colored, of the United States Senate was invited to speak in the College Chapel which he accepted. Another fact which illustrates our position, religiously, was that Henry Ward Beecher was invited to speak there also, which he accepted. These were representative characters for the times.

11. Now to close up my narrative perhaps I may be allowed a word personal to myself. I confess to a total defeat in the business world. The money trust resident in the City of New York control by their system of call loans the business interests and to some extent the destiny of eighty millions of people. They first say to us borrow our money. Then when we are fairly embarked on our business voyage they say to us we want our money. Credit is ruined, and the party that is found in debt to this monopoly goes to the wall. I know it took property worth more than forty thousand dollars in my case, to pay on demand, an aggregate indebtedness of four thousand. This may be legal but it is not right. By such a system we make socialism if not crime.

HOW APPLETON LOOKED IN 1849

BROTHER SIMPSON: The friends of Christian education have been rejoiced to hear that our conference has commenced an institution under the most favorable circumstances; and they are solicitous to know its progress and present state. Having recently visited the Grand Chute on Fox river, it gives me much pleasure to send you this brief account. A view of the location confirmed the universal testimony of its surpassing salubrity, beauty and even sublimity. The surrounding country is pleasingly undulating on a general level. Through this the pure, living waters of Lake Winnebago have worn a deep, broad channel, with many a graceful curve and abrupt sweep. On either side is seen a steep bluff, now receding, now beetling and bold, a hundred feet above the dashing flood. Many ravines branch out from the river, in some of which ripple the modest rivulet. Here, too, are the "sedes recessae," and "leafy dells," of deep and sombre gloom, that poets speak of. Over all waves a forest of almost every variety of trees. From shore to shore stretches, zigzag, a rocky brink, over which the rapid waters fall four feet, and then shoot off down into a quiet basin one mile below. Here is water power unsurpassed this side of Niagara; for here the largest tributary of all the northern lakes falls thirty feet; and is on the line of navigation now being improved from Green Bay to the Mississippi. A town has been laid out, and called Appleton, in honor of a gentleman of Boston, who is expected to endow a professorship. Within the last three weeks thirty lots have been sold, at about $50 each, to actual settlers, who agree to build upon them dwellings, stores, shops, mills, &c. The country is eagerly bought up to be improved into farms, for which it is well adapted. Busy preparations, for the building of the preparatory department, are in progress. The materials are on the ground, much of the work is done, and it is confidently hoped students may be admitted in July next. The agent has been successfully employed in the east till recently, while the Principal, with the help of friends, has secured, in our own conference, near $7,000 in scholarships, the installments on which have been very promptly paid. At the suggestion of Mr. Lawrence, who donates $10,000, a petition is now before the Legislature to change the name from "Institute" to "University," to transfer the election of President from the conference to the Board of Trustees, and to allow the annual income to be $50,000 instead of $10,000. It seems to be the design of benefactors to make it a first grade educational foundation; and, hence, the changes are desired. Let it be baptized in the prayers of all Christian people, that it may become a mighty engine for God and His truth.

Notice to the Benefactors of Our Country

The Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin is to include a Preparatory and a Teacher's Department under the same charter affording gratuitous advantages to both sexes of Germans and Indians.

A location for this institution has been selected in Wisconsin on the Fox River, below the rapids of Winnebago Lake, and above the town of Astor. This location is a very desirable one, as it promised many advantages. It is decidedly a healthy spot; and desirable from its accessibility to Nature's thoroughfare which now carries through its mighty channel articles of all kinds of commerce for the merchant and farmer for hundreds of miles from Green Bay into the interior.

Amos A. Lawrence, Esq., of Boston, Mass., has regarded this location very important, as an opening, for the promotion of good morals and education among the promiscuous crowds of emigrants in a portion of the country, where it is most needed, and also, for the benefit of the numerous tribes of uncivilized nations in the west, and the half civilized which are permanently located near the spot. To encourage the carrying forward of the noble enterprise to elevate and improve all classes, Mr. Lawrence has made over to Trustees the sum of $10,000 to be available when an equal sum shall have been raised from any other source. Who can benefit the world more with his means, than to respond, either in part or in whole, to this generous proposition.

We, the subscribers, friends to the promotion of good morals and literature in our rapidly populating western country, believing that our future National independence and prosperity is to be controlled by the Institutions and efforts of the present day, and that an institution at the place designated and of the character above described would greatly promote the objects as set forth;—we do, therefore, agree and obligate ourselves to pay the Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin, or the Agent of said institution, the several sums affixed to our respective names, to be applied according to the provisions of the Charter secured in January, 1847.

PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT OF LAWRENCE UNIVERSITY

APPLETON---WISCONSIN

This Institution at Appleton, a village unsurpassed perhaps by any in the State, for health and beauty of location, has been in successful operation since Nov. 12, 1849. With a competent Faculty it now commences a new academical year, and its friends believe it worthy of extensive patronage, and expect for it even greater success than has hitherto attended it.

Instruction is given in all the branches usually pursued in similar seminaries at the East comprising those in common English, Natural, Mental and Moral Science, Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, Music, Drawing and Painting, Composition and Elocution. The Teachers, in conducting the recitations, have acted and will continue to act upon the belief that accurate and definite knowledge, though slowly acquired, is preferable to superficial, though seemingly rapid, attainments.

The charge for board in the Institution, including room-rent and use of furniture, will be $1.63 per week, payable quarterly in advance. The students will provide their own wash-bowls, towels, brooms, lights and fuel. Washing 3s per dozen.

Board in private families can be obtained at prices ranging from $1.75 to $2.50 per week.

The Steward will furnish wood prepared for use at cost.

Books and stationery can be procured at the Institution, for cash, at Milwaukee prices.

During the season of navigation, steamboats ply, daily, between Fond du Lac and Appleton,—thus furnishing in connection with the stage lines, easy and rapid communication with almost any part of the State.

CALENDAR

The First Quarter of the Second Term commences January 3d, 1852; the Second Quarter of the Second Term, March 26th, 1852. Examination and Exhibition at the end of the year, June 2d, 3d and 4th.

Debating and other Literary associations have been established and creditably sustained by the students. A small Library is already obtained, and additions will continue to be made. Donations to the Library or Cabinet will be thankfully received, and duly acknowledged.

FIRST CONFERENCE REPORT, 1848

Unanimously Adopted.

After carefully examining the accounts and reports of the Rev. Reeder Smith, the Agent of the Board, and Rev. Wm. Sampson, the Principal of the Preparatory Department, who also acted as Agent the past year, we are satisfied with the correctness thereof, and those gentlemen are entitled to our thanks for their indefatigable exertions in behalf of the Institution, and that they be continued in their respective appointments for the ensuing year.

It is a matter of surprise as well as of high gratification to the Committee to learn of the economy with which the Building has been erected, in view of the location in what was a mere forest one year since, and the known expense of working under such circumstances.

Resolved, by the Wisconsin conference, that we have undiminished confidence in the Board of Trustees of the Lawrence University to manage its concerns, and of the ultimate success of this great and important enterprise.

Resolved, that we recommend to the Board of Trustees the continuance of Rev. Wm. Sampson, as Principal of the Preparatory Department of the University, and that the school commence in September next. We also recommend the continuance of Rev. Reeder Smith, as General Agent of the University, and that both these gentlemen be cordially recommended to the confidence and liberal attention of a

A. Bronson,
Conference Chairman.

ADDRESS DELIVERED AT THE LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE OF LAWRENCE UNIVERSITY, APPLETON, JUNE 28, 1853

(This is the present "Main Building" or "Recitation Hall."

By Rev. Alfred Brunson, A. M.

Mr. President, gentlemen of the Board, gentlemen of the Faculty, Students and Fellow Citizens:

We have assembled this day on the most important, solemn and interesting occasion that ever did, or probably ever will, occur in this northern portion of the young, prosperous and promising state of Wisconsin, to lay the corner stone of a University. Others may be hereafter founded, but they will not be the first, as this is, of its kind. Others may arise from the prolific soil and from among the thousands who may inhabit this region, but no one can or will rise from the unbroken forest or have the difficulties to grapple with that have met the friends of this institution from the first step—the felling of the first tree and laying the first stone of this noble superstructure.

In 1845, Mr. Amos A. Lawrence, of Boston, Massachusetts, offered the noble sum of $10,000 to the members and friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church in this, then, territory, for the purpose of building and sustaining a seminary of learning, of the higher grade, somewhere between Green Bay and Lake Winnebago, provided a similar sum should be raised by the Church for the same purpose.

That noble and philanthropic gentleman, noticing the effect of our itinerant system, in the frontier settlements of the country, and the facility with which we reared institutions of learning, and at the same time knowing that we, as a people, had less pecuniary means to do with than others of equal numbers, conceived that he could both aid the needy, and at the same time place his benevolence in hands that most probably would produce more, in its glorious results, than if placed in other hands. And may the God of all our mercies grant that he and his descendants may never be disappointed in this matter.

The preliminary steps were taken, a charter was obtained, the academic building erected, in which hundreds of our promising youth have been instructed, a thriving and beautiful town has been built up, the surrounding country has been and is rapidly filling up with an enterprising, industrious and moral community; and not only the required $10,000 has been raised by us but some $50,000 more, and all this in the space of about five years since the first blow was struck in this then dense forest. And now we have assembled to lay the corner stone of a university building, which when finished, will compare favorably with any similar one in the United States, if not in the world.

Is not this a day, and an occasion for mutual gratulation, for thanksgiving to God, and for grateful songs of praise? Surely it is.

In the superstructure now about to be raised upon this massive foundation, we hope and trust the rising youth of our land, and of future generations, will be instructed in all the arts and sciences requisite to make men wise, great, good and useful, and that too, in the name and fear of God.

It is a truth that should never be lost sight of, that education, like the gospel, may be used for weal or for woe; it may be a savor of life or of death, as it is used; it qualifies men to do more harm, if turned to that end, while it qualifies for more good if so used. It adds fuel to the fires, and strength to floods of error in unholy or unsanctified heroes, while it supplies the church, the state, the community, with more powerful appliances for good, and to repel error. As Jefferson said of the freedom of the press, if it offers facilities for spreading of error, it at the same time supplies the means to repel the wrong. But as education may be used for evil, if in wicked or improper hands, we have the stronger and more imperative reasons for guarding its portals, its expanding and ennobling powers from abuse by its being sanctified to the good of man and the glory of God. And to do this, education must be accompanied by moral and religious culture; it must be given in the name and fear of God and by men who, by precept and example, teach that fear.

We are aware that infidelity raises its hideous head and objects to having education in the hands of ministers and their friends and supporters. But where, upon the broad map of the earth, or when, in the history of time, can it be shown that education has prospered except in the hands of religionists of some kind?

With Jews, Pagans Mohammedans and Papists, the education of youth has been in the hands of the Priesthood. And even in infidel France and Germany the colleges and universities now so perverted from their original use, were founded and endowed by those professing the christian faith. In the only attempt ever made in these United States to erect and sustain a college from which gospel ministers should be excluded, though based upon a princely endowment, it proved to be but a signal failure; and the Girard College had to be placed in hands equal to ministers, where prayers, the Bible, and religious and moral culture is made an essential part of education.

Even in our state institutions, though in a professedly christian community, if they have not been placed in the hands of religious men, they have failed of success.

The greatest and most successful educational system which has ever blessed our world, sprung from our New England Puritan fathers, and was induced by their religion. From then most of us here to-day have descended. Their spirit has disbursed itself, like and with their blood, through our veins, and from one of their noble and philanthropic sons came the munificent donation which gave rise to this promising institution.

We are aware that some morbid minds and squeamish hearts fear, or pretend to fear sectarian influences from schools patronized and conducted by any one religious sect. It is true, there is a moral influence surrounding every man, and every association of men; and who ever comes within this, will feel more or less biased in favor of their benefactors. This is natural, and cannot be avoided. But further than this we declare before God and the world that we have and shall exert and use no sectarian influence, whatever.

History shows that mixed faculties, that is, associating men of different religious creeds, in the same institution, has never succeeded. Two colleges in Ohio, and the same number in Pennsylvania, which were managed, or attempted to be managed upon this plan, failed of success, and were so far remodeled as to have but one person concerned in their control.

Let each sect of christians have their own churches, colleges, &c., and manage them in their own way, and all may succeed, but poor human nature is such that men of different creeds in religion do not affiliate and agree in such enterprises, any better than did the iron and clay in the toes of Nebuchednezzar's image.

We have, and offer no objection to others, in their institutions of learning, any more than to their churches. We say live and let live. We wish all men God speed in all good and lawful undertakings, and we deem education and teaching true religion to be among the most important of such doings.

From this university we hope to see intellectual and religious light diffusing themselves over our entire land with the brightness of a meridian sun. We hope and trust in God our Father, whose we are and for whose cause we labor for the good of our species, that from the halls of this institution will go out men who will grace the pulpit, the forum, the Senate, the executive chair of states and of the nation, and of the healing art; that the farm, the shop and the counter may be conducted in accordance with the rules and laws of sanctified science, here obtained. And we hope that the future wives and mothers of our land may carry from these halls the means of guiding future generations in the paths of virtue, religion, and usefulness to our race.

I congratulate you, friends and patrons of this infant institution, on the auspicious circumstances under which we meet and lay this corner stone. Our beginning, and our success, thus far, hardly has an equal in such cases, and our cheering prospects of the future, are equally encouraging. And may He in whose name we have thus far moved in this matter, and in whom we trust for future success, continue to own and bless; and may His protecting care and prospering influence be ever over and towards this place, and may its influences contribute largely to the good of man, and the glory of God.

FROM THE MILWAUKEE SENTINEL

Correspondence of Milwaukee Sentinel of February 15, 1856

LAWRENCE UNIVERSITY: This popular collegiate school was chartered in 1847-8, as the Lawrence Institute, and was changed in 1849 to Lawrence University, the name by which it is now so widely known. Rev. Reeder Smith, a minister of the M. E. Church, who had been designated by Conference as well as by Mr. Lawrence, to explore the country and locate a Collegiate Institution, under an endowment from Mr. Lawrence of ten thousand dollars, took up his residence in the wilderness where Appleton is now located. He had endured hardships and privations, and toils and cares, in maturing a plan for carrying out the wishes of Mr. Lawrence in founding an institution of learning which not only should be an honor to its originator, but an important element in building up a large and influential denomination of Christians, and a lasting benefit to the rising generation.

BUILDINGS AND LIBRARY.

The Preparatory Department went into operation in the fall of 1849, occupying a building 70 by 30 feet, four stories high, and was continued as a very respectable academy until the arrival from the east of Rev. Edward Cook, D. D., as President, May, 1853. In that year the present college building was commenced, and the cap-stone was laid May 27, 1854. This building is the largest and best of the kind in the West. It is one hundred and twenty feet long, sixty feet wide, and five stories high, and contains a chapel capable of seating 1,000 people, seven public rooms, for class and lecturing purposes, a library and reading room, cabinet rooms, two library society rooms, and thirty-three private rooms for Professors and Teachers.

The Faculty consists of the President and five Professors and Teachers. The library is made up of the choicest selections from every department of literature, and contains three thousand volumes, with a fund of $10,000 from the estate of the late Samuel Appleton, of Boston, Mass., obtained through the application of Reeder Smith's agency, for the increase of the library.

The literary character of the University stands the brightest, by far, of any in the State, and is to-day exerting a wider influence in disseminating knowledge than any similar institution in the West. It has a Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior class in the college proper, and corresponding classes, numbering nearly as many more, in the Ladies' College.

PRESIDENT.

From a short acquaintance with President Cooke, I judge him to be just the man for the place. Possessing a remarkably fine intellectual organization, a well-balanced mind, and a temperament indicating decision of purpose, affable in his bearing, and courteous and gentlemanly in his address, he seems to be well calculated to be placed at the head of so popular an institution.

SCENERY.

Seldom, if ever, has it been my good fortune to visit a place so admirably combining all the necessary elements of commercial prosperity as may be found in this locality. There are so many choice, romantic spots along the high bluffs, and on the pinnacles cut through with deep ravines, covered with the native forest-trees, for fine residences, and so many broad avenues for trade and commerce, combined and backed up by the most extensive water power in the whole West, all must conspire to make this point one of the most desirable in the Northwest for a permanent residence. The capacity of the water power here is forty-nine and a half feet fall in a distance of one and a quarter miles, with a width of seventy rods, and the rise and fall of the river never exceeding three feet. So it may be seen, when it is also known that the river here has a smooth, rocky bottom, that mills may be multiplied ad infinitum, yet the water power will not be exhausted. It is ample for all purposes to which the ingenuity of man may bend it, at all seasons, and if properly improved in the hands of skillful capitalists, will form a basis for a prosperous town as firm as its own rocky bed.

BROKAW HALL

IMPORTANCE AND CLAIMS OF THE LAWRENCE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN

A lecture delivered in the east in 1859 and 1860
by the Rev. Reeder Smith.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days."

In presenting to the consideration of the public the claims of the Lawrence University, Appleton, Wisconsin, I wish to exhibit,—

1st. Its favorable location territorially.
2d. Its providential origin.
3d. Its present condition and wants.
4th. The justness of its appeal, on all these considerations, for immediate and liberal aid from all who have the means .

I

Wisconsin is peculiarly situated among the States of the Union, nearly in a direct line west from Massachusetts, and central among the Northwestern States;—Wisconsin has a greater number of miles navigable along her shore and ports than any other State, except one, in the Union; having nearly 1,000 miles of lake coast, and 1,000 miles of canals and navigable rivers. The extent of territory is 53,924 square miles, equal to eight of the smaller States in the Union, and a population between 800,000 and 1,000,000. The number of private schools or academies in the eight States, is 1,362, one to every 39 square miles, while Wisconsin has only one to every 1,000 square miles. These States have one college to every 1,661 square miles; Wisconsin has only one college to every 26,962 square miles.

The city of Appleton, in Wisconsin, is situated centrally and easily accessible for the location of a great educational institution, being 30 miles south of Green Bay, 100 miles northwest of Milwaukee, 200 miles from LaCrosse by railroad, and 200 from Prairie du Chien by steamboat inland navigation to the Mississippi, to Madison 110 miles, Lake Superior at Ontonagon 210 miles, Chicago 200 miles, (see map.) It has a population of 4,000 or 5,000, gathered in 11 years, and within 50 miles, other cities and villages have multiplied to the number of about 25 or 30, with a population ranging from 1,000 to 10,000, with a rich agricultural country in all directions, populated by a community that requires common schools and teachers in every school district, demanding a college at this very spot.

A large region of country south and southwest, must be supplied with teachers from this central point. Steamboats from the Great Lakes to the Mississippi pass through this city, making a direct navigation from the River St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico. Steamers 144 feet long by 34 feet wide pass the falls by canal through four locks.*

* See Improvement Company's Report, page 19 of Appendix.

"The Lawrence University of Wisconsin, located here, is 200 miles from the Northwestern, and 225 from the Hamline University. There is no institution of its grade, or likely to be, within a circle of 200 miles, and there is already a population within 100 miles sufficient to furnish pupils for a first-class University, and increasing with almost inconceivable rapidity."—Zion's Herald.

This Institution stands upon the University grounds, containing about 40 acres, on the west bank of a majestic river, 700 feet wide, 3 feet deep, with a fall of 44 feet in one mile—nearly central in the city, and elevated 75 feet above the river, and 500 feet distant, in full view of the rapids, surrounded with the most enchanting scenery in Nature's lovely form.*

* See Scenery, Appendix, page 20.

II

The Providential Origin of this University

The late Amos Lawrence, of Boston, in 1846, at the age of threescore years, conceived the idea of planting this enterprise, upon the distant banks of a river, then lined with wigwams, and to be reached only by the savage trail or canoe; a land he never saw but through the vista of the future. As David conceived the establishing of the house of God, and only anticipated its future, as he committed to his son the task of completing it, so in anticipation of this, Mr. Amos Lawrence said: "I have proposed this enterprise to my son, and he will offer to give into the hands of your people, $10,000, for a college in Wisconsin, to be paid when you raise $10,000 more for the same object. My son, Amos A. Lawrence will make the offer to you, to establish an Institution of Learning, where one will be much needed, and if you go there and meet his views, he will help you on with the undertaking, liberally."

Amos A. Lawrence, in his care to meet his father's anticipations in this new enterprise, writes for advice to Bishop Alonzo Potter, of Philadelphia, and Rev. John S. Stone, Rector of Christ Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., to which they reply as follows:—

"Mr. Amos A. Lawrence, of Boston, having consulted me in respect to the plan and incipient operating of the Wisconsin Institution, I cheerfully state that I advise that the begining be made on a moderate scale, and that no attempt be made at first to organize more than the preparatory department, and that much atention be given to the preparation of teachers for common schools."

"I fully concur in the wisdom of the above advice, given by Bishop Potter. (Signed,) JOHN S. STONE, D. D.

This concurrence was accompanied by $100 from himself. and $500 from his son, who is also an Episcopal minister.

Amos A. Lawrence, desirous of getting some responsible party to apply his benevolence wrote to Chicago, August 14, 1847, as follows:

DEAR SIR: In case you think it necessary in order to concentrate some action upon this enterprise, I wish you would proceed at once to the Conference now about to meet at Chicago, and I trust you will find immediate steps may be taken toward carrying it into effect. I have conveyed the sum of $10,000 to Trustees, to be held by them until an additional sum of $10,000 shall be raised for the same purpose, and then to be paid over according to provisions named.

I should prefer that this institution should be placed under the control of the Methodist, rather than any other, excepting my own church, (Protestant Episcopal.)

I have a high opinion of the adaptation of the principles of the Methodists to the people of the West, and I think from all I can learn, that their institutions are carried on with more vigor, and diffuse more good with the same means than any other. It seems to be decided by experience, that all literary institutions must be controlled by some sect, and efforts to prevent this have blasted their usefulness. I will co-operate with them in all that is necessary for its establishment and organization. Very truly yours,

AMOS A. LAWRENCE.

To Rev. Reeder Smith.

The following concurrent response upon the character, location, and necessity of this enterprise, ought to settle the fact, that it had its origin with God:

The following is the evidence of the fact to the public:

New York, April 5, 1848.

This collegiate enterprise was laid before the Conference in Wisconsin, and by that body favorably entertained and cordially approved.

At the same time Rev. Reeder Smith was requested to act for the Conference in procuring the means and adopting the measures necessary to the permanent establishment of the Lawrence University of Wisconsin.

For these purposes Mr. Smith was subsequently appointed Financial Agent. In all this he is known to have acted as Mr. Lawrence's representative, and in accordance with his wishes, in view of the foregoing facts, with a profound impression of the importance of such an Institution at its designed location.

The undersigned earnestly commend him and the cause he presents to the confidence and liberality of all the friends of religion and learning in that most interesting portion of our country.

Signed,

E. HEDDING,
B. WAUGH,
E. S. JANES,
J. S. STONE,
E. N. KIRK,
S. OLIN,
J. DEMPSTER,
A. STEVENS,

In further proof that this claim is entitled to general confidence and support we add the voluntary concurrence of the following statesmen from Michigan:

Detroit, Nov. 2, 1847.

To the friends of Education: The fidelity, success, and ability of Rev. Reeder Smith, in his relations with the Albion Seminary at Albion, Mich., which is already distinguished as a highly literary institution, which is beholden to Mr. Smith, its financial agent, for the stability it has attained, gives ample warrant that the enterprise in Wisconsin, bearing the name of Lawrence, which Mr. Smith leaves our State to take the management and supervision of, will terminate with entire success.

We, the undersigned, fully commend this Institution in Wisconsin, and Mr. Smith, to public favor for aid, wherever he may judge it necessary to travel in securing the interests of the same, throughout the United States.

Signed by

Governor W. L. GREENLY,
LEWIS CASS, United States Senator,
ROSS WILKINS, District Judge of U. S. Court and nine officers of State, and other literary gentlemen of Detroit.

We add to this the concurrence of an assembly of fifty clergymen in New York, Dec. 4, 1847, as follows:

Resolved, that we consider such an institution of vital importance, and entitled to public benevolence, having for its object the diffusion of religious literature in a destitute portion of our country, where it is most needed.

And as Mr. Lawrence and the Rock River Conference have committed the carrying out of their wishes to the Rev. R. Smith, we commend him as every way trustworthy, and this object as one of great importance.

Signed, S. MARTINDALE, President,
E. CRAWFORD, Secretary.
200 Mulbury street.

The position then is sustained, that this University originated in a wise Providence, and that the character, location, and establishment were made in Wisconsin, where it now is, under the sanction and advice of the best, the wisest, and the most pious men in the Church and in the State.

When all this is taken into the account, none will reject this claim among the number that have been multiplied without counsel, wisdom, or advice from either church or State, but sympathize with this, and the man who is, by the same Providence, made responsible for raising this endowment.

If such responsibility has been placed upon the hands of the speaker by such men and bodies of men, no apology will be expected for employing testimony that includes the name of the speaker; but, if the importance of the responsibility has entered into his heart, they will rather expect the most urgent appeal and the most indefatigable persistence till he has secured its permanence by raising $83,000.

DR. RUSSELL Z. MASON

Second President

ITS PRESENT CONDITION AND WANTS

The amount now invested in buildings, library, apparatus, fixtures, &c.,*	$ 70,000
Appleton Library fund, donated by Samuel Appleton	10,000
Citizens' fund for chair of Mathematics and Civil Engineering,	10,000
Scholarship fund for free tuition,	10,000
	$100,000

Normal instruction and English literature are, at present, paid for by the State. This leaves all the chairs in the college proper without endowment, except one. A college capital of one hundred thousand dollars.

The disastrous fire which occurred in 1857, consumed the building occupied by the female and preparatory department of this University, when 200 students belonged to that department. This fire broke forth so suddenly at night, and in such a wind, with the severe cold weather, as to prevent the removal of any furniture, including three pianos.

The Faculty consists of six Professors of distinguished ability and rare literary qualifications, who work on small salaries, with a conviction that they are doing a great work for the accomplishment of a great object. There are also two female teachers, who are doing all they can with their department, under embarrassments.

The President, Edward Cooke, D. D., presided at this institution with acknowledged ability and merited popularity,* six years, with an average of three hundred students a year. Prof. R. Z. Mason is now acting President.

Rev. Dr. Edward Cooke has taken charge of a congregation in Milwaukee, for this year, and receives his support from thence.

The college and the public demand the Doctor's return immediately, but this cannot be asked for until the president's chair is endowed. The number of teachers and ministers sent out into the State from this College is greater than from any other college in the West, for the same time.

The fire occasioned a diminution of income from room-rent; there is an entire destitution of money in that State, and in consequence of an inadequate endowment, the whole enterprise is so crippled that, with the present faculty, without salary for President, and a voluntary endowment agency without salary, the University is running behind its income from two thousand to three thousand dollars a year; and, until the endowment asked for is realized, this cannot be avoided.

We are therefore compelled to apply to a generous public for the following amounts, which we want and must obtain from the East, as follows:

1. For a suitable structure for a Female Department.	$10,000
2. Endowment of chair, Ethics and Civil Polity (President's chair)	20,000
3. Endowment of chair, Ancient Languages and Literature,	15,000
4. Endowment of chair, Hebrew and Biblical Literature,	15,000
5. Endowment of chair, Natural Science,	12,000
6. Endowment of chair, Modern Languages and Literature,	11,000
	$83,000

The amount of eighty-three thousand dollars can never be better applied.

This makes a large demand upon public benevolence to secure one object, but it will be our business to show that the object is much greater than the amount required. Of the $83,000, $50,000 is asked for from the East by the Agent, for endowment, and $10,000 to rebuild. This leaves $23,000 for the General Agent to raise in Wisconsin during the same time; a portion of which is now obtained in donations of real estate, which will be made available at some future time.

The resolutions of the Wisconsin Conference, consisting of 150 members say:

"We will earnestly and perseveringly co-operate with the Trustees and Agents of the Lawrence University, in raising the sum of $50,000 for endowment, and an additional amount sufficient to build a suitable structure for the female collegiate department of this University,

H. C. TILTON, Secretary."

His Excellency, Governor Alexander W. Randall accepts the Presidency of the Corporation, and writes as follows:

Executive Office, Madison, Wis., 1859.

DEAR SIR: I have received the late Report of the Board of Education, in which they have resolved to raise East, for a permanent endowment, $50,000, and $10,000 for rebuilding. I have also examined and approved the official doings of the Trustees, in sending out a special endowment agency to accomplish the above.

I do most cordially concur in the same; and ask, in behalf of this college, the most liberal aid of the philanthropist; and I am of the opinion he can find no better object to bestow his benevolence upon, than the endowment of the Lawrence University of Wisconsin, and think the above sum ought and will be met by the older and richer States.

ALEXANDER W. RANDALL.

About one-third of the $50,000 is now pledged, on condition the balance is secured.

Our statement presents an estate now of $100,000, of a permanent nature, but not productive. Amos Lawrence and Samuel Appleton, the originators, may be looking upon this investment as promising more good to the world than any other offspring of their benevolent minds.

Would $83,000 to secure the position, alone, that is now actually occupied by this vigorous youth, of ten years' growth, have appeared a large amount in the generous hearts of the originators and founders of the Lawrence University?

These men were too brave, as well as enterprising and munificent, to have valued the amount of $10,000 each; then, placed in the hands of strangers, to be planted at this position in defence of truth, and our country's liberty. They valued this amount, in comparison with the position now secured through their planting, no more than the husbandman counts the grain of wheat in comparison with the golden harvest.

If $20,000, eleven years since, were thrown broadcast, when no surrounding cities were in existence within twenty or fifty miles, as a security that it would be seed sown in good ground, how much more readily should the remainder be given now that forests are felled, prairies subdued, cities built, commerce opened, and minor schools established.

These men, with such minds, would be likely to say that the one-half that is now a reality was not anticipated;* but if the amount of seed sown there has been doubled five times, besides the expense of keeping the position, and multiplying brave men, and sending out many reinforcements to the great battlefield, this amount, in view of the object, is only like paper and packthread, compared to the silk or satin goods you buy. Then every enlightened, enlarged, benevolent mind will say, the amount is small, compared with this object;* and this amount ought and must be had.

"The liberal soul deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things he will stand." Did these men, unsolicited, propose and plant a station, or standard, at this most central and commanding position, among all the great Western States, before civilization had reached the spot? Did they judge of the world's future, from the past; and, like the immortal Washington, in his country's defence, ever secure the location

* Especially when we compare this amount with amounts asked and obtained for colleges that, in point of position or usefulness, come as far below this, as this amount is less than the amount given to establish colleges that have more endowment than students, because the object of the patronage is thought to be more for support to men, than to educate and save the world.

of some brave men with munitions of war, beyond the advanced enemy?—And if the first defence or fortification was of necessity made with dispatch,—as upon Dorchester Heights,—their position, alone, gave the power of defence, and by the use of the very sand, which they removed from the entrenchment, only put into hogsheads, of its own weight, would have mowed down hundreds of the approaching enemy, breaking and destroying the most expensive and powerful weapons of their warfare. We shall show that this originated not alone in the wisdom of men, but was ordained by the wisdom and providence of God, who always appoints the means to accomplish the great end of his purposes.

To us it looks strange and mysterious that such an enterprise, so much needed, at such a time should be crippled in this way. To see two hundred youth in a preparatory collegiate school, stripped of house, apparatus, and furniture, in one night; and one hundred and fifty-six young ladies, looking in vain for accommodations to assist them in acquiring a discipline necessary to a position of a most responsible nature, in forming a country's destiny as teacher and mother. But God may have seen that this very event was necessary to bring this claim to some rich man's or woman's heart, that could never have seen this opening for great usefulness, in the application of their money, only by the light of these flames, while consuming the smouldering ruins; bringing to their vision, before they close their eyes in death, this great field, with this sublime object, for their benevolence, that they may apply a portion of a fortune, that otherwise might never increase their bliss in the eternal world. As they "that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever," you have the opportunity, before you die, to erect with your money this building, that would be seen, from the eternal home of the blessed, in future years, to be a nursery of mothers and teachers, producing an annual harvest of the richest results to the church and the world, in the salvation of multitudes which will not only "multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness: which causeth, through us, thanksgiving to God,"—but will augment the number of stars in your crown, that will shine forever and ever. This demand, then, should be prayerfully investigated. You may have supposed that you have seen all the world's claims, and it may have seemed to you that they have been multiplied till your heart almost loathes the presentation of a new one; but God is prolonging, and has for years prolonged, your life for some object;—can you say for what you have lived? Your money, that God has made you a steward of, you can neither eat nor drink, nor carry with you; and should you leave it to such as know not the value of money as the fruit of industry; if your gold is not cankered by saving it for them, it may eat their souls when left to them, in neglect of God's demands, as doth a canker, to all eternity. Now, God, by this providence has brought to your consideration, this claim, for rebuilding and endowing the Lawrence University, and you should, instead of treating it with any indifference, understand that Christ, who knocketh in various ways, at the doors of your heart, says, he has stood without till his locks are wet with the drops of the night; and by this, Christ may desire to elevate your seat in heaven, eternally, by giving this opportunity of endowing a chair, or building a temple of science, for the moral and religious culture of the West.

The immediate demand for the University, in that country, is the necessity to educate the youth of both sexes. Every settlement and town within one hundred miles is casting about, either to select and send their youth to be fitted as teachers for their towns, or looking to this University to furnish them. From 150 to 200 young ladies annually ask to be instructed at this school, and as many young men. Thousands of the youth, especially the girls and misses, are to be found in the neighborhood, like the ore in the mine waiting the refining process, and soon they will form the character of thousands more, whatever that may be. The progress of science and civilization in any country will be just in proportion to the character and condition of their females. Will not God hold us responsible, who have the means and power to give a right direction? This calls for a candid investigation, to know what we can do, and whether we are willing to do, or whether we will say, like Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

We have said that this Female Department was consumed by fire, and two hundred students were left in one night to look but in vain for its classic halls. This loss must be met from the East. I say, in the language of Presidents Woolsey and Day, of Yale College.

"This institution is one of great importance, and something should be done speedily to help it at this present time: nothing can be done at the West in the present condition of that part of the country; and the call is great, both upon Methodists and all Christians, to do something for this object."

The importance of female education demands especial and immediate aid. This department is of more importance to the world than any other portion of the great educational work. To give a right formation to the mind and character of woman, is to give form and character to a country or nation. Few men ever possessed elements of distinction or greatness, but were attributable to their mothers. Who could desire a higher honor, or to do a greater good to the extended West, than to be able of his own means, to rebuild and establish permanently the Female Collegiate Institute of the Lawrence University in such a commanding position in the world?

The mothers of the now unborn millions may here receive direction or formation to a course that is to be eternal. As the direction of the ball thrown from the cannon takes its course from the placing of the carriage that bears it to the field of action, so in like manner our hand may give direction to a course which is eternal. The day of eternity, then, can only develop the amount of good done here, and in that day it can be seen who were formed by your benevolence for bliss, and who were lost through our neglect.

To form and establish the character of a country's offspring, is to give stability to a country's future greatness.

A few living witnesses of eminence will now be introduced, whose opinions we urge in its behalf.

Ex-Governor Horatio Seymour, of New York, writes, August, 1859, from the spot, as follows:

"It is of the utmost importance to get good colleges here at the outset, and thus give a right direction to a great and growing population. I have attended two of the commencement exercises of the Lawrence University and I am acquainted with its general character and condition. I look upon this University as one of the most interesting and useful institutions of the Northwestern States. The uses of this are not merely prospective. At this time, it is giving education each year to more than 300 students. There are very few of the older and more richly endowed that are doing as much. Those who gave so liberally to establish this would be gratified with the result of their beneficence, if they should visit this college, as I have done. It will do them great and lasting honor. I hope the generous liberality of Appleton and Lawrence will soon be seconded by others."

The Trustees and Faculty are Eastern men, and know the condition of the country, and they state as follows:

"We believe there is no educational enterprise more important or more worthy the aid of the philanthropist."

Milwaukee, December, 1859.

"I have watched with much solicitude the Lawrence University, since 1850, an enterprise full of promise to the cause of education in the West, and notwithstanding the great want of a sufficient endowment which has greatly crippled its operation, I am happy to know that it stands at the head of the literary institutions in the Northwest. It has educated more students and accomplished more good, than many other institutions much its senior, and has a stronger claim upon the public for benevolence, than any similar object in the country." HON. M. STEVER.

THE JUSTICE OF THIS APPEAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SYMPATHY OF THOSE WHO HAVE MEANS TO AID.

The following letter from Lee Claflin, of Boston, was communicated October, 1859. At the same time he subscribed five thousand dollars toward making up this endowment:

"Dear Sir: Among the objects of charity I have thought there were none, where the amount could do more good than those institutions whose object is to give our youth a good Christian education, particularly in our new and Western States, where the rising generation are soon to be our legislators, our teachers, our ministers;—in fact, they will be the nation!

"If I were to live my life over again, instead of giving less, I should give more. As to leaving a large amount to children, after we are gone, it would, in general, do them more hurt than good.

"I am satisfied that no man is a true Christian until he has given up himself, and all he has, to God; and then keep all he has, subject to the order of God; then it will be a pleasure to do what God shall direct. I was early prospered, and early began to be liberal, and since that time I have found it more blessed to give than to receive. I hope and trust God may give you wisdom and grace to guide you.

Lee Claflin."

Hon. Edward Everett, of Boston, October, 1859, writes as follows:

"Dear Sir: I have much pleasure in stating my opinion of Lawrence University, of Wisconsin. It is very favorably situated in a country rapidly settling, fertile, salubrious, and rich in mineral wealth; easily accessible on all sides,—on a noble river. The only question now is, how to obtain an enlargement of its resources, with a view to increased usefulness.

"This University, if adequately endowed, cannot fail to become, by the Divine blessing, a radiating point of intellectual, moral, and religious light to unborn millions, who will, in the next half century, exercise a powerful influence in the government of our country. I consider the new States of the Union as the most important part of the educational field. The East is well supplied with seminaries of almost every kind, from the primary school to the university, and the institutions for professional education. Though much has been done, much remains to be done. I have no doubt this will succeed, if proper methods are persevered in to obtain an increase of endowment." EDWARD EVERETT.

Hon. A. A. Lawrence, of Boston, who has no pecuniary interest in the State, during the same month, pledges, as a portion of the present endowment, $5,000, and replies to a note of inquiry, as follows:

"The college at Appleton is a vigorous and widely useful institution, and there can be no doubt of its permanency."

Rev. S. K. Lothrop, D. D., of Boston, October, 1859, writes:

"I am acquainted with the character and usefulness of this University among all classes, and it has a strong claim upon the country, and upon us, for aid."

The same is concurred in by the following clergy:

Rev. N. Hall, Rev. J. H. Morrison, of Dorchester, and Rev. Dr. Hill, of Worcester.

We have shown this to be of God, and sustained by the *judgment and benevolence of the best and wisest men of this nation. When we combine all the weight of talent, wisdom, piety, and benevolence, concentrated in the foregoing, we must be compelled to say: this University has an established claim before an enlightened and liberal public, in the East as well as in the West, for raising the amount asked for to endow and rebuild, which is for East and West $83,000. This amount will permanently secure a literary citadel, in the midst of the great struggle, from which to draw recruits without importing or transporting. Providence has given such direction to the origin and progress of the Lawrence University, that all men must see that this is a beacon-light, now burning, designed of God to give direction to unnumbered millions, through all succeeding generations.

Europe is pouring into this fairest portion of our earth a flood of rationalism. It can only be met by the united efforts of enlightened Christians. Here is the battle-ground. The hour of conflict is now upon us. The hosts of Satan are marching upon us in three distinct divisions,—the Papal, the Rational, and the Sensual. Who will furnish the munitions of war for the conflict? The majestic West must be educated. If Christianity does not do it through her literary institutions, Infidelity will.

All schools and universities cost money, and have been committed to the care of some individuals. This is a day of liberal things, and requires liberal-minded men to meet the emergency. Christianity is called upon to meet infidelity on a different battle-field; and as science and art have increased the power of man to destroy nations and kingdoms in battle, so now, with the Paixhan gun, and bomb-shell, whole towns and cities are laid in ruins in a day. †

Now in this conflict of armies, from all nations, in this Valley of the Mississippi, where Gog and Magog are to measure arms, and decide a long contest between truth and error, a different weapon of defence is required from what might have been used fifty years since. Science and art now are employed to deceive and destroy the souls of men. Christianity must meet the present condition of the world and use every means to save men.

If ever the Christian church marshalled successfully her unlettered hosts in the conquest of the world, that day has passed away never to return.

It may be the denomination to whom this enterprise was entrusted by the originators and founders have done less for this than they ought, or would have done, had they known its importance compared with other institutions of the land intrusted to their care. But in this undertaking the most liberal-minded men saw in this extended field an opening to do immense good to a great country, by establishing such an institution, and concluded to give to the Methodists the responsibility of applying their bounties, on condiiton of raising and combining that of others in the establishment of the Lawrence University, because, in their judgment, "their principles were better adapted to the condition of the West than any other, and could diffuse a greater amount of good with the same means." If for these reasons these men gave to this enterprise a liberal start for the commencement of our Institution for the diffusion of religious and literary knowledge, we urge this as a strong reason why this denomination should especially aid now. As there is a just demand upon the parent to care for his own child, so we come with this demand, first to the parent that has assumed the responsibility.

The opinions of some, looking upon this measure with enlarged views, are that the importance of the institution is not appreciated by Eastern Methodists, compared with the claims of Eastern institutions. Hiram Barney, Esq., of New York, a great friend to the cause of education in the West, but of another denomination, expressed his views on the subject as follows:

"The Methodists did not realize as they ought, the demand upon them to aid this Institution, on account of the liberal aid given them by others." He knew from his frequent visits to the State and to the College, that the Eastern institutions of the church had not one-hundredth part as strong claim upon the Eastern Methodist as this, and why they did not see it, was strange. He thought this to be of such public interest to the country, that he gave to this six hundred dollars because the Institution was a necessity to the people of the Northwest.

A college, sustained at that position, must exercise a control beyond what any Eastern college could. It took hold of the people in the early formation of the character of the first settlements, and must exert an influence beyond what three or four Eastern colleges could."

Men gave once to the outfit of the sacramental host of the Christian army from their small fortunes, hundreds of dollars, for the promotion of truth, science and religion, but now are called upon to give from their large fortunes hundreds of thousands, secured by the Divine blessing, through the continuance of great national peace and prosperous commerce, at home and abroad, to meet the great demand for our armies on the march and in the conflict, to secure the universal triumph of truth. In proportion to the world's growth and greatness is the demand for accomplishing the world's salvation.

The benevolent Christian now inquires before God, What wouldst thou have me to do? And the greater the amount of wealth possessed by the Christian, the greater his responsibility, and the greater his anxiety to know in what way and in what direction, and upon what objects to expend it. And he is answered, "Give, and it shall be given you; good measure, pressed down, running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that you mete, withal it shall be measured to you again." Luke vi. 38.

This demand urges its claim for immediate aid upon many who must see the utility of endowing this University. Who, then, before they leave the activities of life, will see this fortification made strong, that upon this ground the work of educating teachers and ministers and mothers, may be carried out?

Can anyone among you conceive of an object that has better ground or a stronger claim for your liberal response!

On reflection, where is the spot, in what land, what nation on the whole earth, that has a demand upon your benevolence equal to this? Has any demand appealed better to your understanding, or been better supported by the judgment and opinions of the great and good men of the land, East and West? Can you select a more deserving one, or take hold of one more generally approved by all Christians, of all sects, or one that will reflect more honor upon yourselves, or upon posterity, than to endow with $10,000 or $20,000 a chair in the Lawrence University, that shall perpetuate your name, and be sustained by you, and send lights to other lands and seas?

But if you cannot do this, you cannot say now, as is often said, this claim does not reach me. "Remember, there is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

I trust you will excuse the importunities of this address, when you consider it is delivered by one who selected the grounds in 1848, and penetrated with his family in winter from New England, endured the hazard of navigation on Lake Erie in December, and a journey around the lakes, without one mile of railroad, to reach the spot where the white man's home had never been, or God's worship observed; who saw the first college building erected, and then enveloped in flames; who has given of his own means,* and would prefer, were it in his power, to give the whole amount to soliciting it from others; yet as a parent will insist upon procuring relief and support for a suffering child, I must insist upon obtaining from your benevolence, relief and support to this most worthy cause. "The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord."

You have the privilege of aiding and "doing good even at a sacrifice, with which God is well pleased."

* See second page of the appendix.

I trust you will not say now, as is often said, this is one enterprise too many, or that you have calls nearer home that must first be met. This urgent call is of God, and is now nearest you. It is pleading with you. God has brought this to your door, and is now applying it to your heart. Do not say, go thou and be warmed—or, go thy way for this time; but now give your aid and afford relief. The present belongs to you; the future to God. You may not live to apply your aid to this or any other object; and to what could you apply your money to accomplish so much?

Should you live, you may never have the means again that you possess today. You have the means of relief in your hands now—are they yours? If so, how long will you possess them. To you God has entrusted the means of future safety to the extended West; will you apply it there?

Ships driven before a storm cannot escape the reefs without a compass; neither can the people of this or other lands escape threatened ruin without the aid that God has entrusted with and demanded of his stewards, who alone are accountable for the trust. May God dispose your hearts to apply the amount entrusted with you, for the claim he now brings, in its relief; or in making up your account for death and judgment, will you decide this very hour the amount you will leave to this Institution? I ask that this demand be settled before God. "What thou doest, do quickly." "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days." "Blessed are you that sow beside all waters."

If you cannot give ten thousand dollars you can give ten dollars, and say, "Of thine own have we given thee,"—with which amount God will be as well pleased as with the giving of large amounts by those of large wealth. Now, as drops help make up the ocean, so you can help make up $83,000, which amount is asked for, and must be obtained, in behalf of this cause.

Most sincerely and affectionately, with due respect,

REEDER SMITH, Agent,

Lawrence University of Wisconsin.

Boston, February 24, 1860.

TO THE PUBLIC

THE substance of this Lecture has been weighed by many, including presidents of colleges and eminent doctors of divinity, who have decided upon the justness of this appeal for immediate aid, and advised its publication, hoping thereby to bring this object to the consideration of those that have wealth, and desire to apply it upon the enterprise most worthy, before they die. A candid perusal of this pamphlet will leave any Christian mind favorably impressed with a desire to respond to this just demand upon their benevolence.

SOME EARLY LAWRENCE SONGS

LAWRENCE HYMN, No. 1

TUNE—"John Brown's Body,"

"When the Roll is Called Up Yonder."

Our eyes have seen the promise of the time when Truth shall reign,
When the wrong shall have departed, never more to come again,
In the dual flag of Lawrence,—blue and white,—without a stain, Whose God is marching on.

Chorus—Glory, glory, hallelujah! glory, glory hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah! our God is marching on.

We have watched it when the battle closed around it fierce and grim,
When the hordes of Night and Error sought its glorious folds to dim;
Where the banner waved we triumphed through the guiding hand of Him Whose Truth is marching on.

Chorus—His Truth is marching on.

"Forward!" still His voice is calling; in the van our pennon flies;
Shall the Leader want for soldiers while the moment wanes and dies?
While Truth is marching on?

Chorus—While Truth is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom, that transfigures you and me;
As he died to make men holy, let us LIVE to make men free, While God is marching on.

Chorus—Our God is marching on.

HUGH J. HUGHES.

LAWRENCE HYMN, No. 2

TUNE— "America."

Dear Lawrence, here we meet,
With eager hearts to greet
Our friends tonight;
Here where each hand grasps hand
An earnest Christian band
Resolved to nobly stand
For God and Right.

We'll pledge ourselves anew,
E'er to continue true
To ties of old.
Strangers a welcome kind
We'll give with loyal mind,
E'er may they Lawrence find
A pleasant fold.

Let knowledge here be sought,
And every noble thought
Be cherished dear;
That ign'rance put to flight,
May ne'er oppose the Right,
But wisdom in its might
For aye appear.

Dear Lawrence, noble, grand;
Long may thy gray walls stand
In stately pride;
Long may thy walls resound
With laughter's joyous sound,
And jollity abound,
With God, our Guide.

REUNION SONG OF SIXTY YEARS AGO

Let us mingle all our voices
In a soul-inspiring song,
Let each true Philalathean shout
A chorus loud and long;
And as we lift our voices,
Let the joyful measure flow,
‖:To celebrate the praises of Our fathers long ago:‖

Chorus—Our fathers, etc.

Here they laid the broad foundations
Of our loved fraternity,
Where love is like the endless waves
That roll from sea to sea.
Here they sang the glorious pean
Which they handed down to fame,
‖:Of the name Philalathean,
'Tis a noble, glorious name:‖

Here they met and learned the lessons
That their lives now teach to all,
And with smile and tear each passing year
They gather in our hall,
And they tell us of their trials
And their hour of triumph too;
‖:With faith in God and love for man
They fought the battle through:‖

When traitor wiles throughout our land
Made blood fraternal flow,
Philals, were first of Lawrence's sons
To grapple with the foe;
While they marched beneath the stars and stripes
They wore the badge of blue,
‖:And with shot and shell proved valiantly Devotion to the True.‖

To our brothers who have fallen sing
One stanza ere we go,
They poured their life-blood freely out
Pro bono publico,
Though no marble column marks the spot
Where treason laid them low,
‖:Their names are loved from east to west
Where'er Philals may go:‖

Now, another stanza ere we part,
In chorus all unite,
Hurrah for our society,
Hurrah for Truth and Right;
Hurrah for all the glorious names
That on our records stand,
‖:God bless each earnest, true Philal,
Within our noble land:‖

ATHENA SONG

AIR— "Lily of the Valley."

I.

Oh, the world is rolling onward and time is on the wing,
And we cannot stay the hours as they fly.
We have but little season Athena's songs to sing
Ere we pass them on to others by and by.
But wherever we may wander, in drear or sunny clime,
Far away and in the city's busy marts,
In cottage or in palace, in pleasure or in pain,
Shall their memories find an echo in our hearts.

Chorus—Then gladly let us labor and gaily let us sing,
Wake the merry Ormsby echoes o'er and o'er,
Swell the chorus, swing the banner, Athena's praises ring,
'Tis the name we'll love and honor ever more.

II.

We shall think and see the clearer for the work we're doing here,
And the world has need of thinkers strong and true,
She has work for brainy women in whatever paths they choose,
Work the best and bravest men can never do.
Then we'll heal the sick and lonely, and we'll preach the gospel too.
We will send the flying message o'er the wire,
We will buy, or sell or write, or sing, find honest work to do,
And in paths of toil our feet shall never tire.

Chorus—

III.

We are trying to be braver and better every day
As we meet to talk the world's great questions o'er,
We are fitting for the battles we shall meet along the way.
When old Ormsby hall shall know our forms no more.
The charming name, Athena, in after years shall bring Into being, fairy visions of delight
As our thoughts go wandering backward, and once again we sing
Our dear songs as we are singing them tonight.

Chorus—

FAIR LAWRENCE

Sung at the Anniversary Concert, June 5, 1922.

Fair Lawrence return we once more to thy arms,
For this is thy Jubilee year;
Thine ivy clad walls are grown richer in charms,
Each elm on thy campus is dear.
Remembering fondly the days of our youth,
When we were still sheltered by thee,
We will joyfully stroll through thy temples of Truth
In the rites of thy grand jubilee.

Fair Lawrence, thy children lift glad hearts in song
To tell of the work thou has done;
First fruit of the wilderness, guide through dark days,
Thou hast labored and victory won.
The days of thy scantiness were rich in good works,
Noble men taught and blessed in thy name;
When we name o'er those toilers for spiritual growth,
We know the true crown of thy fame.

Address of Congratulations in Behalf of the Wisconsin Colleges, by President Silas Evans of Ripon College

President Evans gave the solicitation of the colleges of Wisconsin on the 75th anniversary of the founding of Lawrence. He spoke of the value of age and of traditions and the place that Lawrence has served through 75 years of sacrificial service. He referred in appreciative terms of the value of co-operation and the fine example of the same in the colleges of the state. He congratulated the college on its recent growth and the great improvement in its property. He said that colleges have a unique personality; and while they retain it, being founded on varied traditions, their objectives are fundamentally the same. The points upon which they agree are immeasurably more valuable and hold a common possession, than the superficial points they differ in. upon which points there is so much disproportioned emphasis. His message was an informal one, delivered in a happy vein, and appreciated by the large audience gathered.

THE FOUNDING AND THE FOUNDER

By Rev. Edward W. Blakeman, D. D., '07

Education, in an age like ours has difficulty in justifying itself. Agriculture and Commerce have hunger as advocate. Politics can rely upon the tenacity of personal opinion to justify her existence. Even Religion, though neglected in days of health and strength, is assured that one day death will come and force consideration of her issues. Not so Education. She must be content to stand in court without an attorney and be passed upon by a jury picked on the basis of disinterest, save as the stray idealist lifts his voice in her behalf. However, in the case of Lawrence College, Education in this great Fox river valley has placed Commerce forever under tribute and made direct contribution to Politics, Agriculture, and Religion.

The development of water power and the very name of Appleton arrived with the college as did the selection of the site of this thrifty city. Here are paragraphs from letters accumulated at the State Historical Library by Miss Louise P. Kellogg, Ph.D.

Boston, Mass., May 1844.

"I have been thinking more of the Williams land. There seems good opportunity, not only for improving the tone of morals and the standard of education in that vicinity, but also of conferring a lasting benefit on a portion of our countrymen who most need it.

I have a high opinion of the adaptation of the principles of the Methodists to the people of the West, and I think, from all that I can learn that their institutions are carried on with more vigor and diffuse more good with the same means, than any other."

Amos Lawrence

"The Rev. Mr. Smith, the principal of the Institute at the Grand Chute, stopped with me last night. He had all his plans for the college with all the appurtenances belonging thereto. His family is with him to settle there.

The drawings are fine, the town plat also.

Appleton is the name of the new plat so named by Lawrence in his own hand-writing. I have no interest there neither do I know any of the particulars in regard to Mr. Smith.

I would like to have the place flourish. I think it will be the means of bringing a great deal of capital into the country and on to the thoroughfare through here.

He states Mr. Lawrence is disposed to join with Mr. Martin and improve the water-power. Would make any investment you would propose for the erection of mills, etc. There is still anothers of capital.

One man is coming with four hundred thousand dollars. Astor says he will give ten thousand. It appears to me as though the way was open for you to make a gain on our speculation.

Oshkosh is growing fast. We observe Mr. Smith seems to be a smart, shrewd man."

JOS. JACKSON

Before Wisconsin was a state, through interest in Christian Missions in the Northwestern Territory, Amos Lawrence, an Episcopalian layman who had helped Eleazer Williams to funds because, as he said: "you are a missionary in my church," had also offered to a circuit rider of the Methodist communion the sum of $10,000 for the founding of "an institute for the education of Indians and the German settlers." This was the equivalent of a cash gift today of $40,000. Such was the man of devotion and vision after whom this college is named. Read the call of the first meeting of the board of trustees, dated at Fond du Lac, Aug. 25, 1847.

Hon. Morgan L. Martin
Dear Sir:

The board of trustees of the Lawrence Institute will meet at this place the 2nd day of Sept. next for the purpose of organizing, and also of adopting such measures as may be thought most efficient in meeting the proposition of Mr. Lawrence.

Rev. Reeder Smith is here entrusted with the agency of this whole matter by Mr. Lawrence and also by our Conference. As a conference we have resolved to make our best effort to meet the proposition.

Your attention is earnestly solicited and also your co-operation in carrying out the enterprise. I hope you can make it convenient to be with us on the occasion.

Very respectfully yours,
WM. H. SAMPSON
Sec'ty. pro tem of Board of Trustees of the Lawrence Institute.

Moves were effectively taken by those pioneers to meet the proposition of Mr. Lawrence. Circuit-riders and settlers with rare devotion to the torch of learning, followed its gleam through cold winters, endured half crops among the stumps and undaunted by the possible loss of the initial investment, put their names to the notes, raised up friends and guaranteed to prosperity this college. The Rock River Conference became sponser of the enterprise.

That necessary evil now known as "field agent", "endowment campaign", or "pledge getting" was also let loose on the public at an early date: All promoters of colleges will appreciate the following bit of history:

Milwaukee
Hon. M. L. Martin Aug. 24, 1848.
Dear Sir:

The blanks furnished me embarrass my operations. They are not transferable in the scholarships and some that are friendly to the object contemplated, have no children and will not throw their money away.

This at Milwaukee will seriously affect my success inasmuch as some that have influence raise the objection.

I write to have the scholarship made negotiable, and reduced. They are now $100 each and to have them made perpetual. They are now 10 years.

TRACY P. BINGHAM

In 1872 Elihu Spencer reported:

"The first blow of preparation upon the site of the future University was struck by Rev. Wm. H. Sampson who, with brush-hook and axe made smooth the way, that others might walk therein demonstrating that he was truly a working Christian."

That constituted what we would call the laying of the corner-stone.

He goes on to state:

"The first sermon in Appleton was preached by William H. Sampson, followed by the Rev. A. B. Randall, and the Rev. Reeder Smith."

In 1849 the faithful principal was able to report progress and to incidentally give us a look into the office of an early administrator:

Appleton, Dec. 12 1849.

Hon. M. L. Martin
Dear Sir:

We commenced our school at the time we advertised and have now about sixty scholars. Our teachers are thorough and all excepting myself are giving general satisfaction. I wish our building was finished. If so I believe that we could have every room filled by the first of January. Our greatest difficulty now seems to be the difficulty of getting boarding places. I do not now see how we can entirely finish our building before next spring. If our lumber was seasoned we could finish in the course of a few weeks. Our school is increasing every week in numbers.

Wishing you all temporal and spiritual blessings, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
WM. H. SAMPSON.

Not only were these early pioneer educators alert in plans, and in the securing of funds and a site, but they took part in the political events of their day, having the college always in their mind. In this regard, Reeder Smith, may have been over zealous but the following letter is an important item.

Boston, Mass.
Jan. 12, 1848.

Hon. M. L. Martin
Dear Sir:

I am confident your interest is high in regard for education in Wisconsin as well as your desire for the prosperity for all the civil Religious and Political interests committed to your trust. Would dispose you to do all in your power consistent with justice for the promotion of the Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin.

I understood Gen. Cass to say to me that there might be some condition made in the admission of Wisconsin as a State into the Union, to appropriate a portion of the University lands, or some other for the benefit of the Lawrence Institute, and should you see any way to promote such an arrangement this is to ask your attention to the subject.

REEDER SMITH
Boston Museum.

The first University building, the other building being for the use of the Academy, was long in process, not being entirely completed until 1855. The first graduating class came forth in 1857.

Elihu Spencer in 1872 wrote in the language of the period:

"Up to the present time there have been graduated 124 gentlemen and 62 ladies making an aggregate of 186 thoroughly educated ladies and gentlemen sent forth from what less than twenty-nine years since was a dense forest."

As for Appleton, her story continued to be interwoven with, and greatly influenced by the college. In 1857 A. J. Reid, editor of the Appleton Post in a small book set forth in a forceful style the resources and manufacturing capacity of the lower Fox River Valley:

"It is, perhaps, quite unusual, but still it can be easily accounted for, that a Western city of so limited an age, and whose material resources are as yet in the infancy of development, possesses the superior educational advantages which but few places ever enjoy. But when it is remembered that the corner-stone upon which this city has been reared thus far, was an educational institution, founded in this place a quarter of a century ago, it is not strange that this important interest of society should have kept pace, not only with the demands of this immediate locality, but of this and neighboring States as well. Lawrence University was the nucleus about which the elements which serve to make up a city, were collected; and it being the first chief feature of attraction, Appleton stood out from the first as a place possessing unusual and superior educational facilities. The curriculum of the University is as extended and comprehensive as that of any other institution in the West. It embraces classical, scientific and civil engineering courses, while music, fine arts, and other similar branches, receive the attention which their importance deserves.

The University enjoys an excellent reputation, in this and other States, all of which are tributary to its maintenance and development. Its administration is in the hands of an able and accomplished faculty, the members of which rank high among educational men, both in this country and in Europe."

Thus it may be said that in this college, Education not only early justified herself, but was one of the basic elements beneath the stable prosperity with which this whole region of Wisconsin is now richly blessed.

Turning to the founder, we learn that Amos Lawrence had with his initial gift, thoughtfully sent Reeder Smith, his agent, and had with equal sagacity placed on the gift the condition that a sum equal should be found by the Methodists. Mr. Lawrence was a devout and cultured man true to the best of New England—From his diary for May 27, 1843 we read:

Signed articles of copartnership with Robert Mason. I deem this a highly important step in my career, and I pray that I may be true to the new duties I have undertaken and may not allow indolence or timidity to hinder me from taking my full share of the labor which will fall upon me.

I know that our success depends very much upon our own efforts, and I trust that if it should come, I may not forget my duty in using it, not for my own aggrandizement, but for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom upon earth.

I hope to look to God for strength for success; on Him I will lean."

But his tender devotion to man was equal to his regard for the ruling providence of God was paralleled by a tender devotion to men. To a teacher he wrote:

Dear Prof. Sales:
(Harvard College)

Will you accept the above check ($50.) as a New Year's present from one of your old scholars, who though he did not learn much Spanish, could not help learning to love the instructor so disinterested, so kind, so gentle, so playful, and yet so venerable. May God grant you, my dear sir, all his consolations here and hereafter.

With great regard,
AMOS A. LAWRENCE

Mr. Lawrence did not have to be courted, and exhorted to give money for education, rather his persistent benevolence and studied leadership is betrayed:

Boston, Mass.
Aug. 31, 1849.

To Hon. Morgan L. Martin
Dear Sir:

Allow me to express my disappointment that you should not have allowed your name to remain as treasurer of the school in which you appeared to take so much interest.

Though its progress has been somewhat tardy there seems to be good reason to believe that it will (if its affairs are honestly administered) prove successful and be a lasting benefit to the settlers in that neighborhood.

Respectfully and truly yours,
AMOS A. LAWRENCE

Other letters followed; Martin charging Smith with dishonesty and Lawrence standing by Smith awaited further evidence, but this correspondence is on a high plane and reveals the fine character of these men.

Even when differences of opinion and sharp conflict arose the founder of Lawrence kept to that high road of integrity which runs between weak indifference on the one side and stern unbending logic on the other. When he and the Hon. M. Martin finally parted company because of the failure of a third party he writes:

Boston, Mass.
Jan. 26, 1850

I almost wish it were of a different nature, since I am satisfied that to give them up (the lands) would give me less trouble and perhaps be more economical than to hold them.

But, my dear sir, I cannot yield to injustice, nor can I give it any different name when I see it proceed from those whom I supposed to be my friends.

Without doubt my character will be blackened by the various claimants and to that I must submit, but it shall not be said that I am afraid of maintaining my rights, and I assure you I shall resist all the claims to the last, unless they appear in a different light from the present.

Yours very truly,
AMOS A. LAWRENCE

As a student in Harvard about to graduate Mr. Lawrence had, years before, written in his diary as follows:

My advantages for becoming rich are great; if I have mercantile tact enough to carry on the immense though safe machine which my father and uncle have put in operation, it will turn out gold for me as fast as I could wish.

They say riches are a burden that harass the soul, and lead into temptation; so they are to the miser who is in constant fear of losing his acquisitions, and to the profligate who receives an inheritance merely to squander it on his passions.

A good man will willingly endure the labor of taking care of his property for the sake of others whom he can so much benefit by it, but his thoughts and fears will not be perpetually on the alert that he may not lose a dollar and not make all he can.

If one can be rich and yet for his private ease will not be, he is almost as loving of himself as he who heaps up only to count his dollars, and refuses the demands of charity.

It later happened however, that his uncle and his father suffered reverses and the young Amos was compelled to start life for himself without fortune and devoid of the business prestige he expected to inherit.

A closer study of his life also reveals his intimate spirituality.

In 1842 there appears on Easter this note:

To-day we were both confirmed at St. Paul's Church by Bishop Griswald. There were 43 others, among them my brother William and his wife and Marianne Appleton. Our pastor, Dr. Vinton, has labored very successfully.

God has poured out his spirit over the whole country and there seems to be a universal revival. I pray that we may not either of us be led astray by the allurements of this world and forget our God and Savior.

His consecration penetrated to his property bringing forth a series of contributions to religious benevolent, and civic enterprises and a long trusteeship of a Theological Seminary and several other similar offices.

To his son (now Bishop Lawrence) he wrote, during his reclining years:

You cannot expect to be so long and so abundantly blessed as I have been; but you will be spared from some hardships which fall on those who begin life poor.

Property is a trust; and it affords more or less pleasure in proportion to the fidelity with which we administer it.

And to his daughter (on the event of transferring to her considerable property):

But after all it is only yours in trust. It will not be long (tho it may seem otherwise to you now) before you will be called to give an account of the whole of it.

May God help you to use it and all your advantages so as to render an account that will be acceptable to Him.

You have been a dutiful and loving daughter, for which I thank God every day of my life.

On occasion of the death of his own father, Amos Lawrence recorded in his diary the following prayer:

May God grant to me as peaceful a release from this body as was granted to him. God of my fathers, help me to live a holy life; help me by my example to lead those who look up to me into the heavenly life.

Thus has education through the founding and the founder of this, our Alma Mater initiated commerce in these parts, enriched the lives of our citizens, perpetuated the cultural ideal and quickened religion in the lives of us who call "Lawrence" our college home.

LAWRENCE IN 1856

LAWRENCE

Jessica North MacDonald, '17

How small the seedling that our fathers planted,
That grows so wide and bountiful today!
Her children turn to greet her, memory-haunted

From paths a world away.
Perhaps in storied Padua or Florence,
Perhaps in distant Orient they hear,
"Why I remember you...You were at Lawrence
In such and such a year."

Still does she cherish us, our Alma Mater,-
Her many fledglings scattered from her nest,
In smoke filled streets where dreams and visions totter,
Still we find comfort, turning to her breast.

Not feeling that our youth was happiest,
Nor shunning life,- its grimness and its glory,
But turning to the school we love the best
As to the pages of a well-loved story.-

Pages wherein we read and never tire,
Feeling once more the flush of hard-earned praise,
As when we won some height by strenuous ways
And like Prometheus brought down the fire.

Remembering again the quiet talks,
The campus, and the walls where ivy clings,
The groups of laughing students on the walks,
And all the common, worn, familiar things,

And most of all, remembering how it came Almost unheralded,-the sacred flame,-
The dream,-the star,-
The lamp that guides us safe where dangers are.

Great hope have they who toil to plant a college,-
High confidence and trust,
Vision to see it bearing fruit of knowledge
When they are long in dust.

Let them look back with loving pride upon her
If in their spirit-land remembrance calls.
Let them look back and see her still with honor
Inhabiting their halls.

While flowing like a strong and silent river,
Forever issusing and never gone,
The fountain of our hope and our endeavor,
Endless their dream goes on.

LAWRENCE, ITS SERVICE TO STATE AND CHURCH

By Rev. Alpheus W. Triggs, '08

When Lawrence observed her semi-centennial celebration a number of distinguished men and women taxed mind and speech in an effort to set forth adequately the story of her achievements. One related that "Our graduates are found in India, China, Japan, Austria, Brazil, Mexico and New Brunswick and in 28 States of the Union; that 28% are engaged in preaching the gospel; 23% are lawyers; 8% doctors; ten actively engaged in University work and many in teaching in public schools." Another said: "A sanctified and sanctifying power from the school now reaches out into all avenues and classes of society. The multitudes lifted by this power into higher life and character, here directly and elsewhere indirectly, no man can number." Still another said: "Lawrence has come to the fiftieth anniversary with achievements so great that no one questions the wisdom of its founding. Beyond all question society has been so greatly enriched by the direct products of this institution of learning that could you by some fell stroke eliminate all its work and quench all its light the world would feel the darkness and impoverishment."

If all this were true then, what shall we say today? Then the campus was 600 by 700 feet and w rth perhaps $20,000; now there are 12 acres worth more than $100,000. Then there were four buildings, and a gentleman of this city made very bold and expressed the hope that there might be four others. Now there are four times four, valued at more than $700,000. Then the faculty numbered twelve; now the number is seventy, including the School of Music. Then there were eighty six students in the college proper; now there are more than eight hundred. At that time there were 418 graduates in fifty years; now the number is 1524, a gain of 1106 in twenty five years. A similar growth in the next twenty five years would give us a great university like our State University.

But buildings and equipment do not necessarily mean success. We might have all these and fail. What has Lawrence done? What service has she rendered to Church and State? It is my privilege to indicate briefly.

It is well to remember that Lawrence was conceived in a spirit of unselfishness and dedicated to Service. As Mr. Lawrence offered the first ten thousand dollars to found the college he wrote: "There seems to be a good opportunity not only of improving the tone of morals and the standard of education in that vicinity, but also of conferring a lasting benefit on a portion of our countrymen who need it." This has ever been the ideal of Lawrence. And endowment campaigns are not "'drives'" but opportunities for other men, like Mr. Lawrence, to place their money where it is transformed into character and touched with the spirit of immortality. This in itself is a great service both to those who give and to those who receive.

Lawrence has succeeded in raising the standard of education in the vicinity. Bishop Bashford, whom Wisconsin delighted to honor and remembers with honor, once said, "All education when logically and consistently developed, leads to Christianity. True education is only a lower form of Christianity. Christianity is the higher education." So we believe. And the aim of our college has always been to produce Christian character without regard to the teaching of particular tenets, for the atmosphere of the college has always been generous to thought.

The second Article of Incorporation reads: "No religious tenet or opinion shall be required for the qualification for the office of Trustee except a full belief in divine revelation; nor of any student shall any religious tenet be required to entitle them to all privileges of the Institution." The ideal is well expressed in the inscription on the seal "Light more light. Truth is light."

Lawrence has produced many leaders, and the leadership of educated men is really not fancied. Speaking of this Geo. W. Curtis has said "If New England has led the Union, who has led New England? Her scholars, her educated class. It is the men of the colleges whose long persistence of tongue and pen fostered the life of this country, and gained for her all that she has won."

Senator Gamble, an alumnus of this institution, said in the first Phi Beta Kappa address delivered here ten years ago, "It is demonstrated that the men and women of prominence and who have records of successful efforts and accomplishments, were largely college graduates". And Pres. Thwing, of Western Reserve University, recently said, "America lacks wise and strong leadership. To educate leaders of and for and by the people is the great insistent call. The college will meet that call." Lawrence has and will meet it. At least two score of her graduates are professors in colleges and universities. Her representatives are found in Harvard, Columbia, Chicago, Northwestern, Michigan, Indiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Montana and California. Nor should it be forgotten that a number of her graduates are now efficient members of her faculty. Another score are superintendents of schools, and more than 500 are teachers in our schools.

Sometimes it happens that men are obliged to cease the peaceful, productive pursuits of life, and stand in armed defense of what has already been won. Twice has this occurred in the history of Lawrence and as many times the sons of Lawrence have made her not ashamed. Col. Watrous, who died but yesterday, told eloquently twenty five years ago of the patriotic service rendered by our college during the Civil War. He said: "Lawrence furnished private soldiers, company commanders, regimental commanders, an adjutant general for the Iron Brigade; staff officers and chaplains. And I do not recall one of her sons who came out of the army with a tarnished reputation, or a record for inefficiency. When Christian civilization hung in the balance four years ago, Lawrence did not fail. More than four hundred blue stars testify to the devotion of her sons and eleven gold stars speaking with an eloquence surpassing words of the supreme sacrifice made by the eleven men whose names appear on yonder tablet in the entrance to the chapel.

Lawrence has improved the tone of morals as its founder hoped. If it be true that "republics can live only by virtue" then the greatest service rendered by Lawrence has been through the Church, through the men and women who have given themselves to the service of the Church. Sometimes the criticism is made that our college does not prepare as many men for the ministry as it should. Perhaps this is true. Yet it is safe to say that more young men are found out by the college for the Christian ministry than are deflected from such a cause. Some outstanding leaders in the Church have been produced by Lawrence. I mention one. Forty years ago a young man graduated here in preparation for the ministry. He had come up to Lawrence with little or no interest in the work but had been led by a friend to devote his life to that holy calling. After graduation he went east and received several degrees. Then he went to Europe for private study. Returning he occupied important pulpits for a time and was then called to the presidency of a struggling college. At once his genius for administration began to manifest itself. In a few years that college had become the leading college of the state and that president known as the foremost educator. I speak, of course, of our college and of our esteemed and honored Pres. Dr. Plantz. The late Dr. Perry Miller, also a graduate of Lawrence, who told me the story often, always said "The most important work I have done was to turn young Samuel Plantz to the Christian ministry."

On an old gateway at Harvard is the inscription: "After God had carried us safe to New England and we had builded our house, provided necessities for our livelihood, reared convenient places for God's worship and settled the civil government, one of the next things we longed for and looked after was to advance learning and perpetuate it to posterity, dreading to leave an illiterate ministry to the churches when our present ministers shall lie in the dust." If an illiterate ministry were a menace in the early days of this country, it is no less a menace now.

Not a few of the leading ministers of this state and of other states received their college training at Lawrence. And Lawrence has rendered invaluable service both to Church and State through the men whom she has trained for the Christian ministry and for other forms of Christian work. There is much more that I might say but I must close. Suffice to say that by meeting the imperative demand for leaders, both in Church and State, Lawrence has rendered a service of untold value. She has served the past well. May she serve the furture better.

PROLOGUE

A Herald approaches, and the bugle call is heard which announces the opening of the pageant.

Herald speaks:

I beg you, gentle people, one and all,
Bear with me patiently.
Behold in pictured pageantry
The History of Lawrence.
While I turn back the yellowed pages
To that marked "One."
For all of you to read
And trace the route those first Lawrentians marched Almost a century ago.
Be not indifferent,
You of these later years
Whose life is all before you.
For it behooves you ill
To leave this campus
Ignorant, all unknowing
Page One and Two.
Or little understanding
The sacrifices of those early days,
The unguessed tribulations
Of your Alma Mater.
And you, whose purse of years is nearly spent,
Review on this broad stage
The olden times.

While phantom voices, scenes well nigh forgot,
Or never known at all,
Reveal again the courage, self-denial
Shown by our Lawrence founders.
A debt so great we ne'er can hope to pay it.
Only hold fast to what they gave,
Preserve their memory
Bright and untarnished by our constant care.
For the Romantic story
Preceding the beginnings
Of Lawrence College.
Turn to the preface (sometimes called Tradition,)
To War oppressed France,
France, in the bloody throes of Revolution.
See that proud Queen among her courtiers
Smiling and gay though crucified with fear,
As she paints mental pictures of her son
Who has been long imprisoned.
And the young prince himself
We witness led away,
Whether to death or rescue,
None may know.

EPISODE I

Time.—June 20th, 1792. Scene.—The Tuileries during the Reign of Terror. Music. A group of eight in the costume of Louis XVI are dancing a minuet. As it ends the dancers show the restraint due to a royal presence and Marie Antoinette enters. The men dancers bow themselves out, and the court ladies gather around their royal mistress. She seats herself.

Marie Antoinette:

I grieve to think that at my coming
All gayety should be repressed.

First Lady:

Your Majesty, we but dance,
To drug our apprehensions,
Kill the lagging hours.

Marie Antoinette:

I understand.
Would I could find an opiate
To still the burning agony of my heart,
To stop my ears to that clear ringing
Of a small voice
Calling me from a dungeon.
"Mother— Mother," And I—

She half rises, her face working with emotion. The court ladies murmur broken sentences trying to reassure her.

Your Majesty—
We beg you—
Pray compose yourself— (Spoken by three ladies.)

Marie Antoinette:

I will compose myself.
I meant not to alarm you.
The King assures me that there is no danger.
Leave me awhile;
Presently I shall join you. (The court ladies retire.)

The Queen sits alone. Presently she shields her arm as if a baby lay there. She rocks slightly and hums very softly which presently becomes a moaning sound.

Marie Antoinette:

I'd swear I felt the pressure on my arm
Of that dear body. (She raises one hand and regards it closely.)
Small rose-leaf hands
Which lay in mine so trustingly,
Where are you now?
Better to see you folded, white and still,
To my warm kisses all unanswering
Than not to know. (She rises and begins pacing the floor.)
Haunted by fears
I still must act the queen.
Pretend all's right
When everything is wrong,
And in the court, smile, bow and smile
While my heart bleeds.

In the distance is heard a low horrible sound, the cry of the mob. The Queen stops short and raises her hands to her ears as if to shut it out.

Marie Antoinette (hoarsely:)

'Tis come!
'Twas not in vain then,
The howling of the gray old hound
Presaging Death.

(The sound dies away and swells at intervals. Suddenly a revolutionist appears from nowhere and confronts her. When the Queen starts back in terror he laughs loudly.)

Revolutionist:

To think her haughty majesty
Should fear me—Gaspar!

Marie Antoinette (facing him courageously:)

I fear you not, canaille.

Revolutionist:

Then have you need to fear me!
For as the prophets prophesied of old,
I say to you, that e'er the sun hath set
Oft on the fountains splashing near Versailles,
Your blood, and His, and that of the young Dauphin,
Shall form three fountains,
Ruby-hued and gushing,
Draining the source of Austrian pollution,
Leaving France clean and free,—Untrammeled.
Foreigner—Traitress!

He goes out as suddenly as he appeared. Marie Antoinette watches him depart. She walks down stage center, her face hidden in her hands as if to shut out the picture he paints. Gradually she raises both hands over her head and stands in an attitude of supplication. She is terribly shaken. She begins to pray.

Marie Antoinette:

God! Not for myself I ask this favor,
Nor for my sovereign.
We who have played, have lost, must pay out forfeit.
But for my little son, I crave Thy Mercy.

Beg that by holy miracle Thou'llt save him;
Swear death will find me murmuring Thy Blessing.
Seal Lips that smile and heart that feels no terror,
If his dear head be spared.
Oh Holy Mother,
Thou who hast watched with anguish
The last slow breath of Thy Beloved Son,
Intercede for me!
At the fair court of heaven
Ask for this one small life,
Mother—Thou hast so many!
Let him not pay
The price of our transgression.
I will pay all.

(She sinks to her knees continuing her prayers and draws a crucifiix from her bosom.)

Thrice Blessed among women,

(The roar of the mob drowns out her words. It is now mingled with the singing of the Marseillaise.)

Marie Antoinette (Still praying:)

Pray for us sinners now and at the hour of our death.

EPISODE II

A Prison

The young dauphin stands with his hands tied behind him and bound with chains. He lifts his face to the grating from which comes a streak of light.

Dauphin:

To see the sky if only for an hour;
To listen to a bird,
To breath the flower scents.
My waking moments
Are filled with terrors,
Only in sleep am I at peace.
In dreams I see my mother,
Exquisite, tender,

Hear her loved voice and when I run
To throw myself into her arms
I wake to find my gaoler bending o'er me
And a new day whose tortures I know not.

* * * * * * * *

Hush—Men are without.
I must compose myself,
As should befit a Bourbon.
Enter two men with ropes and guided by the gaoler,

Gaoler:

The brat's awake. His hands are tied. He'll make no trouble.

First Man:

Why, he's but a boy.

Second Man:

How old are you, Sire?

Gaoler (angrily:)

Sire him not in my presence. He kicks at the boy savagely.

Dauphin:

I have seen seven summers.

Second Man:

I have a son who will be eight in April.

First Man:

I like not war on children.

Gaoler:

What's all this talk about? Remember the cub soon becomes the wolf. Pull the leash about his neck and lead him away like the dog he is.

Dauphin (tremulously:)

Is it to Death?

First Man:

We know not, Si—, boy. A mysterious order has been given us of a sudden and we know only that we are to bring you to an unnamed presence. (The boy tries to be brave, but changes from a prince to a terror-stricken little lad.)

Dauphin:

I am not afraid to die
But 'tis not fair to die
When life is all before one.
Even our Blessed Master
Measured his thirty years.
And you—by your gray hairs
I know for long
Have felt Life's blessings

Gaoler:

Rather its burdens.

Dauphin:

Is it my fault
That I am born a Bourbon?
Can a babe choose its fate?
Ask to be cradled near a throne?
Do you not fear
If my blood stains your fingers
That a small, pallid form,
Clanking these very chains
Shall haunt your dreams?

(The men glance uneasily at each other.)

Gaoler:

Enough of talk.

First Man:

Sire, we must do our duty.
What it may be, we cannot say.
But in my heart,
I hope this sudden change of order
Is for your good.

(He places the rope over the boy's head.)

Dauphin (sharply, as one used to giving orders:)

Unbind the rope!
Am I so formidable
Even in chains,
That two strong men must choke me
As I walk?

(Sheepishly the men remove the ropes and the small prince stalks in front of them with his head thrown proudly back.)

Second entrance of herald is announced by bugle.

Herald:

In the first chapters you will see Priest Williams,
Friend of the Red man, missionary, dreamer,
And with the mystery of the long lost dauphin
Veiling his name with Romance.
Back in those early days
When the Oneidas roamed o'er these banks
And on the river
Paddled their swift canoes
See him in councils with the stolid redskins
Mourning their lost homes,
The encroachments of the White man.
Next in far Boston, Eleazar Williams
Pleads for his brothers,
Asks the wealthy Lawrence to buy his many acres
Along the broad Fox River
And keen-eyed Amos Lawrence, kindly, philanthropic,
Purchases all his lands as a simple act of kindness,
And wondering how to use his far-away possessions,
Bethinks him of a school.
That in unknown Wisconsin,
On the banks of the swift Fox River,
Someday he'd build a college,
An institution of learning
For the sturdy pioneer people.

EPISODE III

Indian Music

An Indian enters the scene bearing a few rabbits. A squaw takes the game from him holding it up and shaking her head because it is so trivial. The setting is an Indian camp. A few children play around with bows and arrows. One Indian woman goes to her pappoose hanging in its basket to a tree bough. The Indian stands moodily apart. He speaks

Lost, lost is the Red Man's glory;
Gone, gone is the ancient rule,
And the conquering race
Of the cruel Paleface
Makes the Red Man only a tool.
Red, red all the streams are turning;
Black, black is our land with fire,
And women weep
As the children sleep,
And the buzzards circle higher.
Soon, soon all the game will vanish.
Loud, loud hungry beasts will howl.
And our hearts will quail
When the children wail,
And the wolves 'round our wigwams prowl.
Weep, weep when the foes come on us.
Moan, moan there is cause for fear.
Well we know the pain
As we count our slain,
And pray that Death is near.

The squaws take up the rythm of the poem in a monotonous wail, rocking back and forth as they do so. Suddenly in marked contrast to their wailing, there is the sound of a gay old French boating song, and Eleazar Williams comes into view in a canoe paddled by an Indian. They beach the canoe and Eleazar Williams comes into the group followed by the Indian with some furs. Other Indians join the scene bearing corn which they give to the squaws to grind.

Eleazar Williams:

Peace, brothers.

The Indians are impassive. Squaws bring him water and food.

An Indian speaks:

A fire is lighted, but there is little food.

Eleazar Williams:

It is enough.

After a pause he looks at the Indians sitting silently in a circle. Finally he speaks.

My children, I feel from your long silence that you are unhappy. I know too well that the deer are disappearing; that the buzzards feed on your dead torn from their graves by the hostile Menominees. And my heart is sad.

First Indian:

Many moons back you made promises. You led us to these hunting grounds.

Second Indian:

For you we forsook the fertile lands of the Oneidas. We left our homes towards the rising sun, our strong, safe lodges, our honored dead.

Eleazar Williams:

Have I not suffered with you? Do I not feel with you the pangs of hunger? Is not my meadow black with fire? Only trust me, and I will save you. I will lead you further west to lands where the young deer feed tamely in the tall grass, and the spotted fish jump in the water in the early evening. The Great White Father at Washington gave these lands to me. To me your brother, in whom flows the blood of many kings. In the land of the rising sun are many chiefs who do me honor.

First Indian:

How does that help us?

Eleazar Williams:

Tomorrow I go on a long journey. Many suns shall set e'er I reach its end. But the friend of Priest Williams will listen to him. He will give him much wampum and with it we shall seek new hunting grounds to the west. Your old men shall die in peace, your children show bright faces as they play. I have spoken.

He seats himself, makes a sign and the pipe of peace is passed around. Then he enters the canoe and disappears. The Indians execute a solemn, ceremonial dance.

EPISODE IV

Study of Amos Lawrence in Boston. Mr. Lawrence is sitting at a table writing. A man servant enters.

Servant:

The Indian who calls himself Priest Williams is here again, Sir.

Lawrence:

I may as well see him this time. It is always money that he wants.

Williams (entering:)

I beg you to accept my compliments, Sir.

Lawrence (somewhat bored and amused:)

Why am I honored with a visit, Williams? I take it you are in trouble again.

Eleazar Williams:

Sir, trouble has ever dogged my footsteps since as a child I was torn from my mother's arms.

Amos Lawrence:

Your mother was an Oneida?

Eleazar Williams:

My adopted mother was of the St. Regis tribe. But she who bore me was Austrian.

Amos Lawrence:

And where has your home been?

Eleazar Williams:

I was hidden in Canada after my escape. Those first fearful years remain in my memory but faintly, for a long fever followed my prison life. When I was fourteen or fifteen I was sent to Longmeadow, where Nathaniel Ely was to educate me and my Indian foster-brother, John, at his expense. John soon wearied of civilization, but I continued my school work, and later studied at West Hampton and at Dartmouth for a time.

Amos Lawrence:

Then you are not an Indian.

Eleazar Williams:

The Iroquois have adopted me into their tribe. On Waren Hicki, the Tree Cutter, they call me—and I speak many Indian dialects—but, (proudly) in blood I am a Bourbon.

Amos Lawrence:

So you expect me to believe that story?

Eleazar Williams:

Sir, if it be not true, why did Prince de Joinville journey to these ends of the earth, Green Bay, so to inform me? Cannot you see my resemblance to the Bourbon line? My skin is dark, but not copper colored. And if I am not the lost Dauphin of France is it not truly a strange coincidence that I, a lad of precisely the same age, should have been brought so mysteriously to Canada and adopted by Mary and Thomas Williams at that time? There is testimony of John Bleeker of Albany that money was regularly sent to him for a French child of high rank who was concealed somewhere in Canada. And as you know the death of the young Dauphin was never established.

Amos Lawrence:

If you truly believe this, William, and Prince de Joinville has proof, why do you not press your claim?

Eleazar Williams:

Sir, can you imagine how terror would be etched in the mind of a child of seven who had undergone the persecutions of the Reign of Terror as if with acid? Horror overwhelms me even now when I pierce too deeply the veil that hangs between my long illness and my first conscious day in Canada. A dark, empty room unmans me. The clank of chains causes a damp to stand on my forehead. No thought of France draws me, or ever can.

Amos Lawrence:

I begin to understand, though it is hard for one to believe.

Eleazar Williams:

At heart I am an Indian. Those healing days while I was learning to forget were spent with my Indian parents and playmates. Is it not as great an honor to rule the Red men, as the red-handed Frenchmen?

Amos Lawrence:

I suppose so.

Eleazar Williams:

Some day I shall establish a great kingdom for the Indian where he shall reign supreme. But first and foremost I am a missionary. I have translated the gospels, the book of common prayer, and the hymn book into Mohawk. I have converted many. For them I work and plan.

Amos Lawrence:

You are a missionary of my own church, Williams, and because I am interested in you as such I will buy your lands. The sum is not large, but remember the lands are of no value to me. Indeed, I know not what I shall do with them when I have acquired them. But you may live there as long as God permits you to serve him. Tomorrow we will arrange the details. (Rises.)

May God in his wisdom reward you, Sir. (Exit.)

Amos Lawrence:

Walks up and down, meditating. Curtain falls and rises immediately on Interlude A.

INTERLUDE A

Amos Lawrence:

With these new possessions I now add new burdens. Is not this too much for one who would improve his mind and his heart and keep himself ready for a change of scene, and an entrance into the Spiritual world? Can one be prepared for higher duties when the mind is filled continually with such thoughts as all these things entail? I sometimes wonder if to our Creator the treasures of men do not seem as trivial, worthless as those objects which we hoard as children seem to us, when adult. Then a broken piece of glass, a frayed bit of rope, bright colored pebbles. When we grow older, a few acres, social prestige, pieces of insensiate yellow metal seem paramount.

Sometimes will we laugh over these trifles as we do now when our sons proudly empty the contents of their pockets? * * * * * But these Williams lands, so far away—what can I do with them?

Enter the Spirit of the Wilderness.

Amos Lawrence:

Pray, who are you?

Spirit of the Wilderness:

I am the Spirit of the Wilderness, the Soul of that great section known to you as the far away region of the Middle West. I represent a people strong in body, in determination, strong in faith, self-sacrificing, enduring, ambitious, not for material gains alone, but for homes, for churches and for education.

Amos Lawrence:

For that reason you think I should be interested because my father endowed a school for boys at Groton, and gave money for the Lawrence Scientific School of Harvard.

Spirit of the Wilderness:

In the east are many schools. You believe in them. Are the young people of sturdy, pioneer Wisconsin less gifted, dulle" in mind, less deserving than those of Massachusetts? Should Geography decide the fitness of young men and young women for higher education?

Amos Lawrence:

Higher education for women! I don't approve of that at all! Woman's place is by the fireside.

Spirit of the Wilderness:

And that is where you will find them—these women of the Middle West. Their lives are barren without the ideals education gives. For them life is spelled with these four letters, t-o-i-l. Do you begrudge them inspiration?

Amos Lawrence:

But it is a thousand miles from here.

Spirit of the Wilderness:

If it were ten thousand, they are still your neighbors.

Amos Lawrence:

It's 200 miles from a railroad.

Spirit of the Wilderness:

Think what a lasting benefit it will be to those who need it most.

Amos Lawrence:

I have so many calls on my purse.

Spirit of the Wilderness:

Honestly, can you think of one by which you can do more good? To make straight and smooth that road on which all must march. To give strength to the marchers to shoulder their burdens. To enable them to pick out the pit-falls, the dangers of the road. To teach them to march as a body, to aid their fellow travellers? What better can your money do, Amos Lawrence?

Amos Lawrence:

And I'll do it. I'll give $10,000 besides this land to start the project.

Spirit of the Wilderness:

Then I will summon one who waits without.

(She signals and a young girl runs in, holding an unlighted torch in her hands, and kneels at the feet of Mr. Lawrence.)

Amos Lawrence:

Why do you kneel before me? What is your name?

Alma Mater:

It is my dream that some day there shall be those who call me Alma Mater. And I kneel that you may light this torch which I hold. A tiny, wavering flame which a puff of wind may blow out, will cause this torch to burn with a light which shall grow stronger and brighter as the years advance, (for I shall guard it carefully) the light of learning.

Amos Lawrence:

You look very frail for such a great task. Are you not afraid?

Alma Mater:

I have a kinswoman who is older and wiser than I, whose courage seldom fails, whose wisdom is unceasing. On her I may lean when I am weary. I may consult with her when I am perplexed. She is the Church.

Enter the Church (M. E.) who puts a supporting arm about the young Alma Mater.

Amos Lawrence:

I would that I might know all will be well. I am a little uncertain of a venture which permits women to be educated!

Spirit of the Wilderness:

This curtain hides the future, but for you it shall be drawn. (The curtain is partially pulled aside.)

Amos Lawrence:

What is the path I see?

Spirit of the Wilderness:

It is the Pathway of the Years. Come! (Taking his hand she leads him down it while Alma Mater and the Church follow arm in arm.)

Third approach of Herald is announced by bugle.

Herald speaks:

Six years have passed since Eleazar Williams
By selling all his lands to Amos Lawrence,
Inspired the merest thought, the vague suggestion
That on these acres could be built a college.
Now you shall see in vivid, living pictures,
Those first famed school days,
Meet professors, students;
Smile at their dress,
Wonder about their costumes:

Relive the plans of Sampson, Stone and Darling.
And some of you who saw it in the sixties,
Shall see a second time, a nations blight,
The lowering cloud of war within our country,
The fearful, anxious days of Civil War.
Our Alma Mater, shouldering her burden,
Weakened and faint,
Emerges finally staggering from the blow
And slowly journeys on.
Strengthened by fresh recruits,
The march begins anew
With ranks so tragically thinned.
Somber and serious they plod,
And many fall.
Till sympathy awakened as the years go on
In hearts of men who truly wish to serve,
Bring Alma Mater tributes.
Heaps high her lap with Gifts
And builds a sure foundation for her work.

EPISODE V

A 10 X 12 room in the log cabin parsonage of S. M. Stone, a preacher of the Winnebago Circuit. A meeting of the pioneers is taking place to pledge help to the new University.

S. M. Stone:

Brethern, before the discussion which is before us begins would it not be fitting to bow our heads in silent prayer before the throne of Grace and humbly ask for God's Guidance and Blessing? (All bow their heads.) Brother Sampson, will you again make clear what the needs of the Institution may be?

Sampson:

The location is already decided upon. Rev. Henry R. Colman and Rev. Reeder Smith have traversed the forests from Brotherton to Green Bay, and from Green Bay to Fond du Lac, selecting the site on the 28th of Dec., 1846. The Charter is obtained. It is now necessary to raise the $10,000 and erect the buildings.

Stone:

What contributions are there?

Sampson:

I have heard that the Hon. Morgan L. Martin of Green Bay and Gov. Harris of Rhode Island are to contribute $1,000 each. And Geo. Lowe and J. F. Meade have donated 82 acres of land which may be reckoned in the necessary $10,000.

Stone:

My brothers, my earthly possessions at the outside estimate amount to five hundred dollars. Of that amount I subscribe $100.00 to this cause in which I so firmly believe, and for the glory of God.

Sampson:

I have spent many a sleepless night planning to meet the exigencies of this hour. In order to carry forward the work I have found it necessary to dispose of my property in the city of Fond du Lac where I own a dwelling, two lots and thirty acres of land, also 120 of timber land. I have had to sell at a sacrifice, but I have risked it all, reputation and property, on the success of Lawrence University. Here is my subscription.

Mr. Darling:

Will not the Wisconsin Conference aid us?

Stone:

The Wisconsin Conference has passed resolutions to try to raise $30,000 in the least. The resolution reads, "In view of our destitution in the West we are still under the necessity of looking to the noble-hearted East to assist us in raising $30,000, $10,000 of which will be needed this year."

Sampson:

Scholarships entitling the subscriber to ten years' free tuition for his or her heirs in said University have been sold, but on account of hard times only $600 has been raised, and that by great sacrifice. And gentlemen, I doubt the wisdom of this method of raising money, even in our extremity.

Stone:

Expenses will be very heavy. The salaries of male professors must be $400 per annum, but a competent female to undertake the duties of preceptress may be had for $250 yearly.

Sampson:

That's a lot of money for a woman to earn! And a well should be dug that all may enjoy the advantage of pure water easily accessible.

Darling:

A planed board fence should be erected about the square, too, but these minor matters may be settled later. Brethern, by mortgaging my property I am able to subscribe $3,000 to the fund. (All show joy at this welcome addition.)

Stone:

That is exceedingly generous, Brother Darling.

Darling:

Brother Sampson, read what we have written in the subsciption book your good wife has made us. (Sampson reads from a little pamphlet made of blue)—Copy L. C. A., Record 1915, p. 26 and part 27, beginning: "Subscription Book No. One, Notice to the Benefactors of our country. The Lawrence Institute is to include a Preparatory and Teachers' Department under the same charter, affording gratuitous advantages to both sexes of Germans and Indians." and ending, "We do therefore agree and obligate ourselves to pay the Lawrence Institute of Wisconsin or the Agent, etc." All sign.

Sampson:

Brethern, I pray it may be granted us to know, a hundred years from now, whether the sacrifices which seem so great to us at this time have born good fruit.

All: Amen (in good old Methodist fashion.)

EPISODE VI

Scene.—A log cabin home in late 50's. Two girls are discussing registration.

First Girl:

Oh, just think! At this time next week we shall really be enrolled in the Institution, or at least in the Female Branch of it.

Second Girl:

I'm almost frightened to think about it. Some of the older girls are coming in this afternoon to tell us their experiences. One is from the East. Imagine how traveled she must be! (Four girls enter. Miss Julia Colman, Francena Kellogg, Lucinda Darling, and Miss Smith.) They greet each other very formally at first. Then the younger girls cannot restrain their eagerness. "Happy to meet you." * * "Pleased, I'm sure." * * "How do you like this country, Miss Smith?"

First Girl:

Oh, don't let's wait another minute to talk about the institution. I want to enroll if I can afford it, and I've a hundred questions to ask.

Second Girl:

Tell us everything from the beginning. It's such a grand building! Four stories and a cupola. Just think!

Miss Colman:

We live there. My father is steward and my brother Henry makes the fire for the morning prayers at five and rings the bell.

First Girl:

For classes?

Miss Colman:

For chapel at 5:30 in the morning.

First and Second Girl:

5:30! Why, it's dark then!

Miss Colman:

Oh, Prof. Kellogg carries a tallow dip and reads and prays. How we shiver! But we wrap ourselves in shawls and the boys in overcoats. It is most convenient, for when we dress hurriedly, they cover a multitude of sins.

First Girl:

Shawls are so stylish. I wish I had one. But I'll wear calico if I can just be allowed to study. We must take the Ladies' Course, I suppose.

Francena Kellogg:

You will not be permitted to take Mathematics. That is only fit for men. But there is English: Elementary for $3.00, and Higher for $4.00; Languages, Natural, Mental and Moral Science for $5.00, while Drawing Painting and Music are extras.

Miss Colman:

The classes are so small you can probably take most anything you want, but of course they couldn't print the same course for men and women in the catalogue.

First Girl:

How good they are to let us come at all. Most colleges are only for men. And some people think it's shameful for women to be admitted to a college.

(Second girl figures on piece of paper busily.)

Lucinda Darling:

What lo you think, girls, Mollie writes poetry! She has a nom-de-plume, 'Lily Lichen'—isn't that elegant? What do you suppose she does between classes?

Chorus:

Studies her lessons, I suppose. Reads.

Lucinda Darling:

Indeed she does not! She plays with her doll.

Second Girl (after incredulous exclamations are stilled:)

Is it frightfully expensive?

Miss Colman:

Father boards students for $1.50 a week with bed linen.

Figurer (awed:)

Miss Colman:

Well, the Institution charges $1.63, including room-rent and you furnish wash bowls, towels, house lights and fuel! (Girl figures again.)

Lucinda Darling:

Tuition is from $12.00 to $20.00. Graduates from 1.00 to $11.00. That's if you are extravagant. And washing is from five to ten dollars yearly.

Figurer:

How could one spend so much for washing?

Lucinda Darling:

And fuel is $1.50 to $3.00 a year.

Julia Colman:

Girls, did you hear how Smith of East Troy broke up a chair in his sister Nancy's room to fix her fire because all the wood was too green to burn? (All laugh.)

Francena Kellogg (kindly:)

If you have a brother or a gentleman friend to chop down trees for you, it helps greatly with fuel expense.

First Girl:

But what will happen when all the trees are gone?

Francena Kellogg:

Oh, the boys plant new ones. I have one planted in my name. (A bit consciously.)

Miss Smith:

Our class has planted an elipse of eleven butternut trees, nine for the nine men describing the curve, and two for the girls occupying the honorable position of the foci.

First Girl (whispering:)

Isn't her language perfectly overpowering?

Second Girl:

What is that you have in your hand, Francena?

Francena Kellogg (reads:)

"Annual Catalogue of the Corporation, Faculty, Students and Course of Study of the Preparation Department of Lawrence University for 1850-51."

First Girl (nervously:)

Do read us all the important rules so we shall not break them unconsciously. (They pour over the book.)

First Girl (reading:)

"You must rise at the first bell, and you must observe the Sabbath with sobriety and silence."

Second Girl:

I never observed it any other way, did you?

Lucinda Darling (reading:)

"No student may attend mixed assemblages or parties of any kind without permission: nor may any gentleman or lady ride or walk together without express permission."

First Girl:

Mercy!

Lucinda Darling (continuing:)

"No lady shall receive calls from gentlemen in their rooms or elsewhere. Visits, if received at all, must be received in the parlor or other appropriate rooms or places assigned at the boarding places of the ladies, and then not during study hours, nor at unreasonable hours."

Second Girl:

Well, it could be arranged.

Lucinda Darling:

But listen, "if any male student have a relative in the female department whom he wishes to see, he will be permitted to go to the steward's room, request her to be sent for, and there converse with her. Brothers can also walk out with their sisters by permission of some one of the faculty, but with no others!"

First Girl:

Is there no exception?

Lucinda Darling:

They are very strict. Miss Crocker warned Julia's brother, Henry Colman, about showing me too much attention. (All look with admiration on Lucinda Darling.)

Julia Colman (reads:)

"At no time and in no case, shall clamorous noise, athletic exercises, smoking tobacco in seminary buildings, the use of gun powder or fire arms in the seminary premises be allowed."

All:

Would any one dare do such dreadful things?

Miss Smith:

Oh, I've heard of it's being done in the East!

First Girl:

Tell us about your travels. It must be exciting to be in a train.

Miss Smith:

Indeed it is. It took us just four weeks. Of course we did not travel on the Sabbath; spending one in Buffalo, and one in Milwaukee. We came from Chicago to Sheboygan by steamer,—150 miles; then by stage forty miles over a plank road,— and then followed the river to Appleton. Such a little place.

Julia Colman:

Well, it has a blacksmith shop, a dry goods merchant, two shoemakers, a book merchant and a wagon maker. I call that quite a town!

First Girl:

Are the faculty very awe-inspiring? How do you get courage to recite to them?

Miss Smith:

Professor Kellogg is so intellectual. He is from Michigan.

Lucinda Darling:

And Principal Sampson always smiles!

Francena Kellogg:

They say Prof. Phinney dreamed out the answer to a problem in Day's Algebra while teaching a district school down east.

Julia Colman:

Miss Dayton can talk in French and German just as easy. And we all love Miss Crocker.

Lucinda Darling:

She is so brave, too. Did you ever hear how she took us for botany specimens to the islands, and she walked across that plank bridge just as cooly and laughed at us when we crawled on our hands and knees.

Second Girl:

Do you have many good times?

Julia Colman:

Saturdays are exciting. We have exercises and orations and declamations. Then there is the Debating Society; the Y. M. D. C. of the P. D. of L. M.

First Girl:

How imposing!

Miss Smith:

The boys' paper is the Students' Miscellany, and the girls' is Euphrosyne and the First Leaf and the Bouquet. They read parts of them on Saturdays.

First Girl (shyly:)

What might happen, if you happened, quite accidentally, to walk a short distance with a young gentleman?

Lucinda Darling:

If it is raining and a young gentleman has an umbrella, he may protect a young lady if he happens to meet her. (Dimpling, she changes her manner.) We call them our rainbows.

First Girl:

I wonder, do you have a great deal of bad weather in Appleton? I rather like rainy days! (Curtain and laughter.)

EPISODE VII

Civil War

A bugle blows reveille.

Alma Mater enters Right. She looks behind her as she walks in hunted fashion. As she is about to exit Left a huge, armor-clad figure strides after her, and clutches her arm. At first she angrily tries to shake off his grasp. Then she cowers, and in pleading tones asks:

Who are you and what is your purpose? I have seen your shadow in the distance for long, but I have hoped that you were but something born of my imagination a creature of my fancy. What do you want of me?

War:

And you could think me a shadow? Deep is the shadow I cast, and red is its color. For I am War—Red War. I come to destroy. I bring this sword. I sear the soul. I feed mankind with the fires of hate. I am old as history. I make houses of mourning in the lands east, west, north and south. I open a door for millions of widows, mothers and orphans. The music that accompanies my song is the clashing of swords, the blaze of cannon, and the weeping and wailing of women. My appetite is unsatiable, and I demand the best. For years men, by struggle and toil, will be paying for my upkeep. I talk only in billions. All must bow to me: the millionaire in the height of pleasure; the farmer as he sows his crop; the musician as he charms his audience; the priest as he prays; the drunkard in his cups.

Nor are they all, for the anguish does not lie with them. It lives on year after year in the hearts of those who are left.

Alma Mater:

Have you no pity on one who has never seen you?

War:

No, for I hate and distrust you. Weak and womanlike as you are, I fear you. I fear that from your teachings men will learn to despise me, and be enabled to live without me, and that I shall grow weaker and weaker, and finally die.

Alma Mater:

Would that men had learned it long ago!

War:

But they have not. I grow stronger and more robust as I grow older. My appetite is more ravenous and my demands are far more appalling than those which used to satisfy me in the old Greek and Roman days.

At my present coming, there shall be swept away a half million men in blue, and nearly as many in gray. And you shall see me yet again in later years.

Alma Mater:

But what do you ask of me, now?

War:

Your finest—your dearest—your best.

Alma Mater:

My children— (and sinks fainting to the floor, while War stands exultingly over her.)

INTERLUDE "B"

Alpha Beta, a sorority—Philalathean—Athena—Chi Zeta, a fraternity—Phœnix—Lawrence—Modern Times—Demosthenean—Amphiction.

Zeta:

That was some party last night, wasn't it?

Alpha:

The best we ever had, yet it didn't cost nearly as much as our formals for the past two years. I am so glad because you know fraternities are always being accused of extravagance. I feel so strongly that we must guard against extravagance and pretentiousness if we are to make good.

Zeta:

Just as we must be really democratic. Enemies of Greek letter Societies, and many of them perfectly sincere, are always bringing up the arguments that we aren't Democratic. I say we are, but we've got to show all these Missourians.

Alpha:

The old alumni are continually telling how democratic the old institutions were, particularly the literary societies. I wish we could get some idea how they managed.

Zeta:

Let's have a seance and call up the spirits of Philal and Phœnix. That's quite the thing now, I believe—and it will give me an excuse to hold your hands.

Alpha (sweetly:)

As if you had to have an excuse. The lights must be low, and we must speak in sepulchral tones, I suppose. (They seat themselves and join hands.)

Mr. Pluto, please give me the Amphiction, the Young Man's Literary Club, Philalathean, Phœnix, Demosthenean.

Alpha:

Why so ungallant (sotto voice) are the spirits of Athena and Lawrean willing to communicate with me?

(A low funeral march is heard and from the entrance is seen a line of spirits of the old Literary Societies in fitting dress.)

Alpha:

Mercy, they have come.. I'm scared, it's so spooky.

Philalathean:

Young man, did you summon us?

Zeta:

Yee-es—that is —I—we, wondered if your old times couldn't give us some good advice. Tell us the way you used to do things, you know.

Amphiction:

There's nothing an old timer likes to give better than advice, even in the spirit world. Of course, we always think our own time much better than modern times, we'll be honest with you.

Alpha (looking at dress suit:)

What's the difference between us? You do things differently. And you never had any swallow tails.

Zeta (grinning:)

Oh, this is one of my assets. I rent it out to the fellows when I don't need it. Last year I earned almost as much as it cost. (All the ghosts laugh.)

Amphiction:

I guess boys are the same in 1922 or 1850.

Athena (putting a scarf on Alpha's shoulders:)

Now you'll feel better. You must be cold. Your dress is so beautiful, but will athorities permit you to wear a low neck?

Alpha:

If you think this is low you should see some of them. I'm glad you like my dress, for I made it myself one Saturday. But tell us about your early days.

Athena:

I am older than sister Lawrean, but each of us has had our day of popularity. Our meetings used to have debates and music and readings—sometimes a play.

Phoenix:

Don't forget the joint meetings. This was a bright spot, for the girls not only joined in the programs, but we were always to escort them home.

Lawrean:

Later we gave a reception each year that was a social event of the season. Almost all the girls had new gowns for it and all the town girls rifled the best homes of Appleton to make the old chapel fittingly elegant.

Athena:

Do you remember how a committee pared off everyone—usually a new boy and an old girl and vice versa—and what troubles they got into?

Alpha:

That was democratic—were you really as democratic as our fathers tell us?

Philalathean:

We really were—a fellow could chop wood or shovel sidewalks all day, wash up, black his shoes, and call on the most popular girl in school.

Alpha:

So he can now, if he is the right kind. It's personality that counts.

Zeta:

How much did you have to spend on this queening business?

Phoenix:

For a quarter you could give a coed the time of her life by hiring a boat at Beltz's for the evening. And if you bought her six carnations to wear on her left shoulder at The Reception she thoughtfully and graciously put one in your buttonhole and thought you most generous.

Zeta:

Them was the good old days!

Philalathean:

When we were all real flush, we'd get up a crowd to go on a sleigh-ride to Kaukauna for an oyster stew. That was an event! (Alpha and Zeta laugh.)

Athena:

And such rivalry for new members in the fall as we had, dnidn't we, sister Lawrean?

Phoenix:

We fellows nearly came to blows about it.

Alpha:

Then you did some rushing even before the days of fraternities? I thought that was our particular vice.

Athena:

But everyone was invited to join a society. No one was left out.

Zeta:

When a school grows so large there must be many groups to take care of its social life. There are bound to be cliques anyway. The first split in the first literary society proved that. If a fraternity will use this tendency to form into groups, as a basis for developing loyalty and high ideals of all kinds, it can yield the finest sort of influence. And that's what we're trying to do.

Alpha:

Of course, we may have our faults, just as you probably did. Now confess. If a student with lots of money or a girl who was particularly pretty registered, wasn't there rivalry as to whether they would go Philal or Phœnix, Lawrean or Athena?

Chorus:

Yes, my dear, we were human, too.

Philalathean:

But money didn't matter. If a student earned his way through school he was admired for it.

Zeta:

And he is now. In every college more and more students are earning all or part of their expenses every year.

Phoenix:

But we produced real orators. Remember when Olin Curtis won the oratorical, and then William Wescott? The celebration we had on those occasions makes your parties look pretty anæmic.

Zeta:

Any devilment in those days?

Philalathean (laughing:)

Say, Phœnix, do you remember how we put the cow in the belfry on Hallowe'en?

Phoenix:

And how we stole Dr. Cook's rig and pulled it way out into the country? And just as we were leaving it the president himself rose from the blankets in the back seat and said, "Now, boys, you can just pull me back again."

Alpha:

No automobiles! (Sighing.)

Zeta:

Nor jazz. (Shaking his head.)

Philalathean:

No, thank Heaven.

EPISODE VIII

World War

Alma Mater sits in a large chair, a book in her hands which she has apparently been reading to her son who sits at her feet. She is more beautiful than ever and more mature.

Alma Mater:

How beautiful the day is!
Are there ever days as wonderful as April?
When the trees, young and old,
Put on youth's tender verdure
And these dear flowers of spring,

Form for our feet a varied carpet.
When birds and blooms and wind,
Combine to make us happy
And drop a curtain o'er the long cold winter
To blot it from our memory.
The quality of the sunshine has something rarer in it
Than that of much-praised June
As if the sun, a timid lover, worshiping at a distance Dared not the passionate embraces
The summer tries to woo with,
But warms with love more tender.
For me, I am contented.
As far removed as mothers e'er can be
From apprehension, for in the Mother heart
Solicitude lies very near the surface,
Though the world dreams it not.

Boy:

Of what are you thinking, Mother dear?

Alma Mater:

My wandering thoughts are always with my children.
With dreams and prayers for these so far departed
Whose faces I but know as Memory loans them,
And I am glad to know by word and letter,
My children out in the world are making progress.
While those close to my side I still can cover
With the soft pinions of my wings at night fall.
(She makes a protecting little motion toward the boy.)

Boy:

Hark, there is sound of music.
My brothers are coming.

Alma Mater:

Music and youth walk hand in hand together.
(The music sounds louder; it is voices singing Tipperary.)

Boy:

What a gay tune it is!

Alma Mater:

The melody is gay, and yet—

The music ends and suddenly in the distance the blare of a bugle is heard sounding reveille. Alma Mater springs to her feet, her hands pressed to her breast.

Alma Mater:

That sound! Twice—twice have I heard it.

Boy:

What does it mean, Mother?

Alma Mater:

The first time, when I was a fond young mother,
It meant that I should stand bereft and weeping.

Boy:

Mother dear, don't look like that.

Alma Mater (recovering herself:)

No, no, I'll conquer all these vain forebodings.
It is some nonsense newly wrought.
Here come my sons, my children,
Eager to tell me all.

A group of boys enter in uniform. They crowd about their mother lovingly, but with great excitement. They take the first son aside and tell him their news.

Alma Mater:

What does it mean?
This strange new dress,
So strange, yet dread familiar?
What your excited glances
Your whispering together?

First son walks over and puts his arm about her shoulder.

Boy:

It means, dear mother, that we are called, must go,
To fight for freedom.
For brotherhood as did our older brothers
Of whom you've proudly told us.

Alma Mater nods sadly in understanding as she cannot speak for a moment.

Alma Mater:

I know—I know
It is from Mother lips our sons first hear
The words, "My Country."
From our encircling arms is learned the lesson
Our country is one Mother we must die for.
So, if we be true mothers,
When they come
To show the lesson is well learned
Can we deny?
Rather conceal the pain deep in our hearts,
Fight back our tears and with a smile
Bid them "God speed."

She puts her hands on her boy's shoulders, and looks long at them all.

Alma Mater:

Go, my brave boys.
You cannot go so far that you escape the circle of my love.
Go knowing this
That I am proud of you beyond all telling
Though it may be cruel hard
To send you into danger.
It would cut deeper still into your mother's heart,
To have you prove unworthy. (Bugle.)

She kisses the boy on his forehead. The orchestra plays patriotic music very softly. The boys stand gathered around her.

THE MARCH

INTERLUDE "C"

A group of elves, one of moonlight fairies and the Spirit of the Fox are dancing together. The Spirit of the Fox is a tall, beautiful girl in palest green. They seat themselves as if in council and the Fox speaks:

Subjects, there is treason in our midst. Two students who have lived in the college environment for four years rebel against our authority. (The circle exclaim incredulously.)

Fox:

You know how long we have reigned in this kingdom. You remember how successful our efforts have always been. Even with that first class of '57. Only three maidens in it and yet look what we accomplished.

For seventy five years we have woven magic spells over the youth of this campus, over blonde and brunette, fair and unattractive, over sombre men who come for learning theological, over giddy children whose only aim was pleasure. One and all they have at some time fallen into our nets.

Yet here are two, a girl most good to look at, and a stalwart football hero. And they dare to laugh at romance, they dare to talk of friendship and of love platonic. (All the circle laughs derisively and echoes "Platonic Love!") One elf asks, "You say they talk of love?" Fox nods assent.

Elf:

Then there is hope.

Fox:

Now I have called you into assembly to conspire against them. Some of you have doubtless been remiss. This very night they plan to wander in my realms. Moth, what means have you to hasten their capture?

Moth, one of the moonbeams, comes forward, with a small sack.

Your Majesty, I have a preparation, a perfumed vapor which I shall throw into their eyes. It is called the Glamor of Romance.

Fox:

Good, and you, Cobweb, what have you to offer?

Cobweb (an elf:)

I have, your Majesty, a skein of silk so soft and fine that mortal can never see it but when I have once bound them together in its folds they will find that neither time nor distance can break their bonds.

Fox:

It is well. And I shall so charm them with my music that they shall forget all but each other.

The fairies and elves applaud and dance again. Suddenly the Spirit of Fox gives a signal and they vanish as the lovers appear.

Boy:

Shall we sit here on the river bank for a little while?

Girl:

Yes, let's. The moonlight is enchanting and I am so tired. It was hard to get away for this last walk together. Girls are such sillies. If they haven't an affair themselves they invent one for some one else. I have told them singly and in dozens that I have known you all my life. That my first recollection of you is when your face was all smeared with bread and honey.

Boy:

And some poor fish has swiped your ice-cream cone, only half licked and so almost as good as new.

Girl (laughing:)

I remember. You gave me your bread and honey as consolation. But they cannot understand. If you buy me a malt choc, and take me to a picture show they all whisper together and begin to look for the diamond.

Boy:

What do you know about that! A fellow nowadays has about five years of starvation after he gets out of school before he thinks of diamonds. My middle name is Horse Sense.

Girl:

Exactly. And I'm not the old-fashioned kind of girl who wants to settle down as soon as she's through school. I want to do something really worth while in my music. I like you, but I don't thrill when you come into the room. Frankly, I'd be bored to extinction to think of sitting down to three meals a day with any man in the world.

Boy:

Go as far as you like. Just because a chap plays around with a girl for a bit, it doesn't indicate that he's thinking of matrimony. Gee, this place isn't a match factory. (During this conversation the fairies show signs of great indignation.)

I'm glad you're so sensible. No one here can understand a real frendship between a girl and a man. They don't know what you mean when you talk about platonic love. Listen, I thought I heard someone laughing. (The elves and fairies are nearly splitting their sides, but adroitly turn their laughter into soft humming of music.)

Boy and girl are silent. Moth dances before them, and from her sack throws a handful of perfumed powder into their faces.

Boy (suddenly:)

How softly your hair blows around your face. I've never noticed before how long your eyelashes are.

Girl:

And it is the moonlight that makes you seem bigger and stronger than usual. Sort of overwhelming.

Silence again while Cobweb brings her skein and binds it around them. Music is heard and another elf raises the boy's hand and places it over that of the girl. Both jump as though electrified. Another silence.

Boy (suddenly and passionately:)

Dearest—(then tenderly)—Why are you trembling? What frightens you?

Girl:

I don't know. I don't understand. Suddenly you seem different to me, and stranger, whom I have never known. (The elves make a magic circle about them, and the Fox waves her wand over them.)

Boy (tightening his clasp of her fingers:)

Do you realize that we are both seniors, and that in a few short days, hours, we are going to be separated? And you with your career may go out of my life forever. Some other man—I just can't bear it.

(They spring to their feet, and the girl hides her face on his broad shoulder.)

Boy:

Won't you look at me? You are crying.

Girl:

I don't know why. I guess it's because I'm so happy, and sad, too, when I think it's our last year.

(Circle of fairies begins to diminish. Music grows softer.)

Boy (stumblingly:)

I have no right to tell you this. I've years ahead before I can even give you a ring.

Girl (interrupting:)

My dear, as if a ring mattered. (She lifts her tear wet face to his with the disastrous result that naturally follows such tempting proximity.)

Boy:

I think I have always loved you.

Girl:

I suppose it began when we were in pinafores.

Boy:

How I'll work for you, and plan for you, and try for you. I must succeed in a year or two at the most. You'll wait?

Girl (smiling through her tears:)

Till the stars grow cold.

He embraces her again but suddenly she pushes him away.

But—what—what will I tell the girls? I honestly meant every word I said about my career, but I didn't know—what will they say?

Boy (triumphantly:)

What do we care what they say. We'll tell them it was the Old Fox that did it, and something about the moonlight and the campus. (The spirit of the Fox unseen holds up her hands as if in benediction and they walk past her, their arms entwined.)

EPILOGUE

For the last time the bugle blows and the Herald appears.

Herald speaks:

Thus have you seen upon this stage
The History of Lawrence. Here reviewed
The tactics of that little band,
Straggling, often exhausted,
Who even so kept step in the long March.
Who levelled the up-grades,
Straightened the tortuous trail,
That pilgrims to the self-same goal
Who followed them,
Might walk over smoother paths.
Oh, Mighty army,
Who marchest now along that broad white way
Equipment light,
Protected from the storm and too much sun alike,
Remember them—those first adventurers—
Who set out, upon an unknown course,
And by whose steps you profit.
With the same quenchless courage,
Fortitude and faith,
May you march on To Victory!

After the processional, and after the last figure has disappeared, Old Father Time, white locks flowing, scythe in hand, appears and draws the curtain. And he speaks the closing words.

Father Time speaks:

So 'tis my lot, as always,
To draw the curtain,
Thus to close the pageant.
You know me well.
Most of you fear me!
Only the children love me
And bid me hurry to them.
The maiden lingering o'er the joys of girlhood,
Bids me pause.
The lovers, living only for the moment,
Defy me.
The wife, holding her husband by her beauty,
Trembles at thought of me.
The aged regard me calmly for the most,
Though some rebel,
And others whisper, "Friend."
I, who was old before the first day dawned,
Shall still be young when this bright sphere is cold.
Precious beyond appraising
Dispensing equally my wealth with all,
Ah, treat me with respect!
Despise me not.
You know too well my name.
INEXORABLE TIME.

THE ANNIVERSARY BANQUET

Russell Sage Hall, 6:30 P. M.

Dr. James S. Reeve, '85, Toastmaster

At the Alumni banquet, Henry Colman, of the First Class, '57, responded much as follows to the toast:

EARLY DAYS OF LAWRENCE COLLEGE

College, we say now. Those pioneer Methodists were modest, so the first charter from the territorial Legislature was for Lawrence Institute, but Mr. Lawrence wanted a more imposing name. He did not say "college," and in 1849, the Trustees secured an amendment to the charter, making it Lawrence University, by which ambitious title, the school was known for many years, though it was no more acceptable to Mr. Lawrence than the first name.

A committee of the thirteen Trustees met in Green Bay Sept. 7, 1847, and after careful study of all locations, appointed a sub-committee, consisting of Revs. Reeder Smith, Wm. H. Sampson and Henry R. Colman, who traveled up the Fox River, mainly leading their saddled horses, from Green Bay to Winnebago Rapids, or Neenah. They wisely chose the present location, then styled Grand Chute. My father wrote of it, "In beauty of scenery, fertility of soil, and the opportunity afforded for fine farming country around the institution, it exceeds by far any on the river." No human habitation was nearer than Little Chute below, or Neenah above. A building was soon erected, 30 by 70 feet, four stories in height. The first story was of stone, and was divided into a chapel, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms. The other stories had recitation rooms and rooms for teachers and students. It was located in the center of the block now occupied by Peabody Music Hall.

On Nov. 12, 1849, thirty five students were enrolled, of whom my only sister Julia, was one. By Dec. 8, the number had increased to sixty. Rev. Wm. H. Sampson was Principal, Romulus O. Kellogg, professor of languages, James M. Phinney of mathematics, Miss Emeline M. Crooker, Preceptress and teacher of Music and Drawing. Mr. Kellogg had just graduated from Wesleyan University, Connecticut, and Mr. Phinney had studied in the same school. Miss Crooker was a graduate of Oberlin College of Oberlin, Ohio, the first college in the world to graduate women in the same classes with men, and Lawrence was the second.

The Trustees met at the close of the first term and elected my father, whose broken voice had compelled him to cease preaching, as steward, who furnished meals to the students at $1.50 per week. If my memory is correct, the salary of full professors was four hundred dollars per year. I, in my middle teens, held the important office of Janitor, to ring the bell at 5:30 every morning, for prayers at 6, and for recitations during the day, also to keep the recitation rooms and halls warm and clean, for what wages, I do not know, as father settled that.

In 1853, Rev. Edward Cooke, of Boston, an alumnus of Wesleyan University, was elected President, and in 1854, Freshmen and Sophomore classes were formed, so the members of the first graduating class were never Freshmen, neither the men nor the women. The Sophomores were Allen J. Atwell and Henry Colman and the Second Year women who recited with us, were Lucinda S. Darling and Lydia A. A. Smith. In the same year the faculty was enlarged. Rev. Nelson E. Cobleigh became Professor of Greek and Hebrew Languages, and we loved to recite to him. He was genial and stimulating. He was also popular in the pulpit, and so successful all around that Lawrence could keep him only four years. Rev. R. Z. Mason became Professor of Mathematics and Physics. Solid and learned in his department, he was as successful in class work and was President from 1859 to 1865. Hiram A. Jones also came in 1854 as Classical Tutor and continued in the Faculty till 1898, excepting the year 1857-58, when he rested, and I took his classes. Rev. F. O. Blair came in 1856. These four were all graduates of Wesleyan. Mrs. Blair was for some time Preceptress, and remarkably successful.

The Catalogue for 1854 shows 195 gentlemen students and 138 ladies, total 333. In 1855, 445 were registered; in 1856, the total was 414 and in 1857, the Faculty numbered 12, the Senior class 7, Junior class 14, Sophomore 27, Freshmen 78, Total, College and Preparatory, 344.

In those days, the Faculty made some efforts, though not very vigorous, to keep the boys from too close intimacy with the girls, except when under the eye of the teacher, yet even in the class room they usually occupied different sides of the room. Personally I vowed, all alone by myself, before entering upon my college course, that I would make no plans for my future home-life, till I had finished the course, and I strictly kept the vow. Yet two of my lady class mates were reported to be engaged before we graduated and one was married, to one not a student, about a month after receiving her college degree. The other was married to my room mate six years after graduation. Coeducation offers many and desirable opportunities for that thorough acquaintance, which is an excellent foundation for happy lives.

RESPONSE

Response of Mrs. Henry Colman, '57 (Lucinda S. Darling) to a toast at the Seventy-fifth Anniversary of the Founding of Lawrence College:

"Every high noon follows a sunrise. Every sunrise is preceded by an early dawn. I well remember one early sunrise, in the spring of 1853. I had knelt at a low window opening to the east just in time to catch the first glimpse of Aurora's "rosy fingers" above the horizon. Then I saw them reaching up and up, sweeping the mists away and opening wide the golden gates,--yet the real sun did not appear as I anticipated. For a moment I indulged in a frenzy of imagination as to what would happen, if thru some slip in the movements of nature, there should never be another sunrise!

This moment of doubt reminds me of something that occurred in the early dawn of Lawrence College. Not every one at that time was as hopeful as the founders were represented to be in the pageant yesterday. Some were apprehensive—how could a college rise and shine on the limit of civilization!—to the northward only a vast forest and a few Indians! Time has proved that the pioneers were wise when they chose this locality, then a primeval forest, on the banks of the broad, tumultuous, on-rushing Fox River, as a suitable place for its foundations. The very atmosphere seemed to be an assurance of the strength and durability that were wrought into these foundations, and of the ever increasing activities of those who would be trained in the college.

Three members of the first class graduated from Lawrence College, still survive and are celebrating today the sixty-fifth anniversary of that notable event. One member, Mrs. F. M. Buck, resides in Yakima, Washington. Two of us remain in the home state of our Alma Mater. The class of seven, of 1857, is unique in some respects, compared with those that have graduated since. Note the number seven, repeated, suggestive of perfection—to be attained! or does it suggest "persistance" to the members of succeeding classes, who have seldom failed, at least annually, to be introduced to "a member of the first graduating class?"

Our graduating exercises were also unique. It seemed that the whole of Appleton was present at this first large gathering in the chapel of our new college building. It was a time of testing, as a recent design in architecture had been used, when the galleries were suspended from the rafters by iron rods, with no supports underneath, until it was discovered, some time later, that safety required them. The four men delivered their orations, one in Latin. As they bowed themselves off the rostrum, they were showered with bouquets from every section of the gallery.

Woman's day had not then fully arrived. The "females" of this class had read their graduating essays the evening before, as addenda to the "exhibition of the Preparatory Department." We were allowed to receive our diplomas, standing on the same platform with the "males." This was a concession on the part of our president, who did "not wish it known in Boston that he was teaching in a boys' and girls' school."

To make the myth of "male and female" departments seem more real, the early catalogues show that not till 1866, were the "females" enrolled as Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors. Previous to this they were simply First Year, Second Year, Third Year and Fourth Year Students. This would sound better in "The Hub" of culture at that time.

I can even now, though sixty five years have passed, since this eventful day, feel the thrill and the twang of the brass band, as it led our procession—Trustees, Faculty, Graduates and Visitors, about four blocks to the Hanna Hotel, where our first Commencement Dinner was served.

From that day to this, we, who survive of the first class, are slowly getting a vision of how little we knew then and how little we know now. Like Henry Adams, who graduated from Harvard about the same time we did from Lawrence, we are not educated yet.

Josh Billings once said "flattery is like Colone water—to be smelt of—not swallered." Our distinguished toastmaster must have been aware of the fact that I belong to that variety of doctors whose speech center has been poorly developed as a result of non use; the prescribing Salts and Senna variety, not the talking doctor. On this occasion the toastmaster is the consulting specialist and I am the plain family doctor who humbly follows the instructions of this great disciple of Æsculapius. You—dear friends—are the poor patients who must sit patiently by and politely smile while you swallow this bitter allopathic, poly-pharmic, toxic dose which I am about to administer. Fortunately for you other speakers have a plentiful supply of antidotes with them. The consulting interrogator at the head of the table will be held responsible for the results. Rest assured, I shall try to keep in mind the rule of the blacksmith in the good old pre-automobile days, "The longer the spoke, the greater the tire." When Dr. Reeve told me that I was to respond to a toast, I was very much in the mood of the colored soldier who was ordered by his colonel to go over the top. I, too, was perfectly willing to be considered a slacker and insisted that I had a large family at home who couldn't very well spare me. The colonel finally persuaded Mose that if he followed his directions there would be no danger; said he, "All you have to do, is to advance in a zigzag fashion." Well, Mose said he would try it. Presently he was brought back shot full of holes. Mose exonerated the colonel, telling him that it wasn't his fault, as he guessed he was a-ziggin when he should 'a' been a-zaggin. I fear very much that in my few remarks, as usual, I will be a-zigging when I should be a-zagging.

LAWRENCE IN MY DAY

By Judge O. T. Williams, '72

In 1867 the attendance was about two hundred fifty, girls and boys, about two-thirds of whom were boys, young men, as I recall the proportion of seats occupied by each respectively, in regular chapel exercises, held twice a day, five days in each week, where roll was called, and once on Saturday.

The "Faculty" usually attended those and changed about for conducting service, although the dear old Prexy—George M. Steele—was the regular stand-by, and a good one he was, too; large enough to reach to a fellow, and wholesome enough to want to hold on to afterwards. He never forgot that he had been a boy or rather he never grew old. He had a dry humor, and a fund of good stories.

Professor Foye's conduct of chapel exercises was the "soul of wit" according to the definition, "brevity is the soul of wit." His reading of scripture and his prayers were never more than "three fingers" deep, figured as we used to, a load in our old muzzle-loading shot gun; and we never "kicked," but went to our rooms or a game of "base-ball in waiting with a hearty but short "Amen!" (all inside.)

Professor Jones, (whose Adam's Apple was never quite adjusted to his collar so that it did not tickle or gall his collar,) always wore an overcoat, curly hair, and a steady devout countenance; in walking to or from the Bible stand to pray or make any announcements, as to Greek accusatives, or Latin idioms. Yet he smiled in class, and so did we; all the fellows, when Lyman J. Nash, led him into an argument respecting the construction or translation of some ode in Horace. We encouraged them on both sides; realizing "tempus fugit"—"all the while," as Hodd. Williston used to say.

John and Henry Faville were numbered among the most justly popular fellows in school, as they were good all around, both in class and on the campus; in base-ball, as she was then played; and on the "broad jump," in which you can count "yours truly." My room-mate in those early days was John Leith, who became County Superintendent of schools in Outagamie County and William H. Chynoweth, who excelled in the classics; but who never could understand why a gaping hole in the seat of his best new "trousers" could not be mended so as to hold, by puckering it together with strong black linen thread. But when we got sponges under our noses and brooms and sprinklers in our hands and sallied forth to sweep the college building (only one,) all class and other distinctions vanished.

John R. and Robert J. Gamble, both of whom afterwards went to the U. S. senate, were among the big brothers who were there then. John was "valedictorian" (get that word?) in my class, and Robert was in my brother's (George L's) class. They were quite different, Robert always jolly, forgetful of the past and hopeful for the future. John forecasting the future from having a compendium of history always in mind. Later, when we were trying an artesian well lawsuit in United States Circuit Court at Sioux Falls, South Dakota, with Robert and one of the Tripps attorneys against us, they put four expert witnesses on the stand who swore that the height to which water would rise in a pipe depended upon the horizontal area of the reservoir, and not upon its elevation above the base. But the jury disagreed with them.

We had very many live wires then, which have not rusted. Judge Loren Edwards, C. M. Wheat, who lived in the belfry and rang the bell. The Clithero Brothers. The debating societies, Phœnix and Philalathean, settled most all constitutional, governmental and labor and capital questions on the forum, at our Friday night sessions which usually closed from twelve m. to two a. m..

The greatest possible rivalry existed between those societies, especially in canvassing for new members. My thesis "Commencement oration" was upon the subject "Labor and Capital" beginning "Labor and capital are natural partners. Each is the complement of the other. Capital without labor is unproductive, labor without capital is nugatory."

Time fails me to tell you of—so many! All great or greater in those days at Lawrence.

TOAST BY FANNY KENNISH EARL, '77

In looking over the Alumni Record to refresh my memory as to names and dates, I discovered that I was asked to prepare a brief outline of "Lawrence in the Seventies" for that publication. I do not know that I can say much more or anything materially different at this time. If I had not happened to have discovered it I should probably have unconsciously repeated myself, for, although the intervening years have brought me a great sorrow, and a great joy, my relationship to Lawrence remains the same.

It was in the fall of 1872 that I first came to Lawrence, fresh from a district school. Although the college and its surroundings may have seemed shabby and restricted to more sophisticated people, to me it was the open door to a new and very wonderful life. I was a student of the college for the ensuing five years, and later returned for a two years' residence. After the graduation of my sister Clara in 1881 my visits to Appleton have been neither many or long, so, of college life in the Eighties I have little personal knowledge.

I believe, however, that the material changes which have so greatly enlarged and improved Lawrence began at a later date—really when Dr. Plantz assumed the Presidency—and the conditions in the Eighties were much the same as those of the Seventies.

The one building—known now as Main Hall—was the sole architectural equipment. Of the library—from which we were permitted to each draw two books once a week—we as under classmen, at least, never saw the inside, except thru the book delivery window. Many of the boys and girls were helping to pay their way by outside work of one sort or another. Life was simple and democratic, and yet, I fancy, these two decades will compare favorably with any later ones for genuine hard work, for character building, and preparation for service.

I have made a hasty summary of the students of that period, probably only approximately correct, but which give a general idea of the activities of the students of that period.

Lawrence graduated between 1870 and 1890 two hundred anl forty one students, of whom seventy-five were women. About twenty-eight per cent of the men entered the ministry. One has only to look over the list to note the loss to Christian service, especially in Wisconsin, if these men had not found their way to Lawrence. Twenty per cent practiced law, and have been an honor to that profession which has attracted so many men of note. One if these had a long and honorable career in the U. S. Senate. About twelve per cent found their work in the science of medicine and the art of healing, and about the same number entered some line of business life, where all achieved respectable and a few remarkable success. Educational work, partly in high schools and normals, partly in colleges, has claimed about the same percentage, and of these so engaged three have become college presidents. A smaller number have been attracted to scientific studies, to practical engineering, to agriculture, and one is registered as a portraitpainter. Evidently, the atmosphere of the Seventies and Eighties was not too heavily charged with scientific and esthetic ozone, but there does not appear to be any who failed to fill a useful place in the world's economy.

Of the seventy-five women who were graduated during those twenty years, a large proportion served for some years in educational work; of these the greater portion, however, soon abandoned professional for domestic life. Sixty-three out of seventy-five show that whatever later statistics may show of a conflict between matrimony and the college education, it did not apply to Lawrence of that period. Of the twelve who were unmarried, three died in early womanhood, and two of these were betrothed at the time of their death. Four chose educational work as a life-long profession and attained unusual success in that line. One is your well-known and genial librarian of Lawrence. The few remaining have not signified the manner in which they have marked the passing years.

Of the home-makers and keepers a very respectable number have achieved success in the various lines of literature, art, music and civic and other public work in addition to their domestic duties. A number studied abroad, and I note numerous travelers among both men and women. Of the women as well as the men we find none who shirked their duties or failed to find their places in the world's work.

Probably few of those who were graduated between thirty and fifty years ago could come back to Lawrence and say that the dreams of their youth had been fulfilled. Life has probably been a very different thing from that they planned when they strolled along the romantic shores of the historic Fox; but it may nevertheless have been quite as worth while. The dreams of youth are mostly occupied with thoughts of self, but the memories of age are filled with the thoughts of others. In spite of sorrow, which none of us have escaped; of disappointments, which are the portion of all, of thwarted ambitions and restricted horizons, I think that most of us have found life a pleasant and desirable thing, and with faces turned toward the sunset, are concerning ourselves with what lies behind the turn of the road with something of wonderment and more of anticipation.

As we come back to a college of wider opportunity and broader outlook, I fancy the difference between the then and the now will be found more in the material prosperity than in the morale of the student body. A diploma from Lawrence, then, as now, was a passport to the best things life has to offer. Conditions of the last strenuous years have changed and unsettled all values of life, in scholastic as well as financial and national life, and yet human nature is not greatly changed. I smile to myself, sometimes, when I read about the terrible flapper of today who bobs her hair, demands a latch-key and discards her chaperone! I bobbed my hair when I was a freshmen, and wore it so during most of my college life. In our day we knew nothing of chaperones, unless we surreptitiously read French novels. The girls are just getting back to their grand mothers' ways, and they weren't so bad. If there is a difference anywhere I think it will be found in the mothers rather than in the daughters. Our mothers took their maternal duties with all seriousness, and they were our invisible chaperones. Like the Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady, the differences are only skin deep. Girls are girls the world over, and in all periods of time. The spirit of youth is sweet and lovable, and its extravagances are all too soon brushed away. We are here to tell you of the later generations to make the most of your splendid youth, and to learn while it is yet time that people do not stop playing because they grow old; they grow old because they stop playing.

With all the marvelous equipment of this marvelous age the youth of today need see no limit to his achievement.

Listen like Kipling's "Explorer:"

"Till a voice, as bad as Conscience, rings interminable changes

"On one everlasting whisper, day and night repeated, so,

"'Something hidden. Go and find it. Go and look behind the Ranges—

"Something lost behind the Ranges. Lost and waiting for you. Go.'"

Hail and farewell. Some of us will not come back to Lawrence again, but we are glad that we came when we did. The changes truly touch us with a breath of sadness, but we would not have them otherwise. "Change is the immutable law of progress. Whatever resists change is dying; whatever does not change is dead."

LAWRENCE IN MY TIME

The next toast was delivered by Dr. James Arneil of the Class of 1890.

"Lawrence in My Time" is a very tame title, but Lawrence in the days of Bess Wilson and Kate Lummis, has a real ring to it, and conjures up an infinite number of interesting and thrilling episodes, great college events and happy days. This was before the enfranchisement of the woman voter; however this fact made no difference to these young women. They were the dominating personalities; the political bosses of the college; what they said went. They created the atmosphere, and developed the college spirit in their own individual way. Kate Lummis was the embodiment of femininity and intellectuality. Bess Wilson was the Viking, or viqueen—the Lydia Pankhurst—possessing a mind teeming with ideas and wielding a Rooseveltian-Wilsonian Big Stick with infinite tact and wonderful effect. Together they made an irresistible team. The balance of the school believed with Henry Harland that the ready concession of minor points is a part of the Grace of Life, and wisely acquiesced.

The men of my time were all diplomats—they remembered Bess Wilson's birthday, but forgot her age.

Whenever I recall certain of the interesting men and women of this period, I realize the truth of Thomas Hardy's saying—that persons of any weight of character, carry like planets their atmosphere along with them in their orbits. The team work of these two Athenas, by contrast, suggests the story of the husband and wife, who were eternally quareling and on the verge of a separation. During one of their frequent spats, the wife looked up the street and saw a magnificent team of heavy draft horses pulling a large load with even, regular step, shoulder to shoulder and apparent ease. "Too bad, John," said Mary, "that we can't pull together like those horses." "Well, maybe we could if there was only one tongue between us," said John.

Our toastmaster confided in me that the reason why I was chosen to respond to the toast "Lawrence in My Time" was because it took me longer to graduate from Lawrence than any other living student, and consequently I ought to know a good deal about the old place. This is no joke, as I was a promising student at Lawrence from 1883 to 1890. None of these years were post graduate years—nor were any of them given over to the study of the fair sex, as they were with Ed Dixon, Bert Williams and Olin Mead. My hearing is acute, and I can hear some one whispering, in the language of the modern student, "Seven years, what a dumb-bell he must have been."

You can well imagine the physical and material equipment of Lawrence thirty to forty years ago. In those lean, spare years she was a university—not a modest college as she is today. When I first entered Lawrence there was the one main building, the same as at the foundation of the institution. This building was "a multum in parvo," as it included the administration building, the chapel, the science hall, the conservatory of music, the school of languages, (dead and alive,) the library, the men's dormitories, the gymnasium and the men's society halls; and say it not in Gath—several kitchenettes—where the ambitious farmer boy, living on one fifty a week, prepared his own meals. In the present plutocratic age when millions are spent by the Rockefellers and Carnegies, as well as by the awakened and liberal state legislatures upon the material and physical upbuilding of colleges and universities, the Lawrence of 30 to 40 years ago would seem a meager, insignificant institution. Today there is scarcely a city of any size but what has a high school far superior in building and equipment to the Lawrence of the eighties. What was lacking in equipment and material prosperity was more than counterbalanced by the character of the men who made up her teaching staff and controlled her destinies. Lawrence University in my time possessed a faculty of dignified, scholarly gentlemen, of the old school, who would have created a university out of a log cabin in the wilderness. Bradford Paul Raymond, the little giant, the Mark Hopkins of Lawrence, was surrounded by a small group of intellectuals whom we students loved, honored and obeyed.

There was Hiram A. Jones, who I am sure was a personal friend of Horace and Cicero. He had discovered the fountain of youth in the poems and prose of his beloved Latin authors. "The wanderings of Æneas and the woes of Dido charmed instead of tiring him. Livy's 'pictured page,' the polished periods of Sallust and Tacitus, and the mighty eloquence of Cicero were to him a mine of delight."

My memory picture of the lamented Professor Wheeler of the Greek Chair, young, intellectual, handsome, resembles that of The Athenian gentleman, so delightfully portrayed by Stoughton Holborn. Were he alive today he would say with the peasant in The Elektra, "Tis in such shifts as these I care for riches, to make gifts to friends or lead a sick man back to health with ease and plenty. Else small aid is wealth for daily gladness; once a man be done with hunger, rich and poor are both as one."

Dr. Henry Lummis, our venerable Socrates, Professor Underwood, inspiring teacher of mathematics and astronomy, Dr. Frank Cramer, the genius of natural sciences, Professor Foye, the magician in physics and chemistry, are all names we oldsters love to conjure with and boast about. Miss Huntington and Miss Everest lent a charming grace and femininity to the atmosphere of the college. This group of immortals on slender salaries, with small material equipment, but filled with a holy zeal, succeeded by the force of their personalities, their devotion to duty—their rare ability as teachers and the greatness of their souls in creating a university with a remarkable atmosphere—with that intangible something called "college spirit."

The two memorable college events in my day were, first, the advent of Dr. Henry Lummis and his famous family into the Lawrence circle. As in Biblical days—the wise men came from the east. This family was to occupy a unique position in the life of Lawrence, for a generation. They brought the culture and atmosphere of old Boston to the little western college town. Most of us profited by the propinquity. They weren't Scotch, but they were just as remarkable as the Mac Gregors. You will recall Neill's description in The Dominie Dismissed of the Mac Gregor Family of "Aberdeen awa'" on a sightseeing expedition to London. The Scot followed by his five children entered the Ritz Hotel, and sat down in the lounge. "Waiter, a bottle o' lemonade and sax tumblers," he cried. The waiter was too dumbfounded to do anything but bring the liquor. He stood in openmouthed amazement as Mac Gregor divided the bottle among the six glasses; but when the Scot took a bag of buns from his pocket and proceeded to distribute them, the waiter set off blindly to find the manager. The manager approached. He tapped the Scot on the shoulder, and in a stern voice said: "Excuse me, but I'm the manager of this establishment." The Scot looked up at him sharply; "Oh, ye're the manager, are ye? Well, why the hell the band's no playin'?"

This Lummis family was unique. No other such brilliant constellation of intellectual stars and social favorites was ever gathered under the roof of one college. We voluntarily handed them first and second honors on a silver platter. The only reason why there was a second honor in the family was because there were not two first honors. On one occasion the younger Lummis children were playing at history and were reading to some of the neighboring children about various races inhabiting Africa. They were very much interested in the Lilliputians and Laura remarked that brother

Harry had said there were several Lilliputians right here in Appleton on the Lawrence Faculty.

The part played by Prof. Lummis as a moulder of the character of future citizens of the commonwealth was something unusual. He had a quiet dignity and possessed a profound learning. He controlled his students by the greatness of his soul. Their love for him was as a good son for a noble father.

The great tragedy for Lawrence, as it seemed to us at the time, was the resignation in 1889 of our wonderful president, Bradford Paul Raymond, able administrator, eloquent divine, remarkable teacher. We felt that the university could not endure without him. As a matter of fact it did live a precarious existence until the advent of another great educator and administrator. A Moses sent by providence to lead the school out of the wilderness of uncertainty and retrogression. One has but to contemplate the present scene with the many new and well adapted buildings, the largely increased student body, the amplified curriculum and the full measured development of that wonderful, inspiring and elevating college spirit of the old days to realize that the right man is in the right place. This growth and progress are not the simple natural accretion which comes with the passing of the years. Other colleges with the same opportunities for growth have remained stationary or have retrogressed.

We must give much of the credit to the tremendous energy, progressive spirit and high ideals of President Plantz. He has recognized with Sir William Osler "the disadvantages to a school of having too many men of mature, not to say, riper years." Insensibly in the fifth and sixth decades, there begins to creep over most of us a change noted physically among other ways by the silvering of the hair and that lessening of elasticity, which impels a man to open, rather than to vault, a five barred gate. It comes to all sooner or later; to some it is only too plainly evident, to others it comes unconsciously with no pace perceived. And with most of us this physical change has its mental equivalent, not necessarily accompanied by loss of powers of application or of judgement; on the contrary often the mind grows clearer and the memory more retentive, but the change is seen in a weakened receptivity and in an inability to adapt oneself to an altered intellectual environment. It is this loss of mental elasticity that makes men over 40 so slow to receive new truths. Harvey complained in his day that few men above this critical age seemed able to accept the doctrine of the circulation of the blood; and in our time it is interesting to note how the theory of the bacterial origin of disease has had, as other truths, to grow to acceptance with the generation in which it was announced. The only safeguard in the teacher, against this lamentable condition, is to live in, and with the third decade, in company with the younger, more receptive and progressive minds. There is no sadder picture than the professor who has outgrown his usefulness and the only one unconscious of the fact, insists, with a praiseworthy zeal, upon the performance of duties, for which the circumstances of the time have rendered him unfit. When a man, nor wax nor honey, can bring home, he should in the interests of an institution, be dissolved from the hive, to give more laborers room. However, as my memory reverts to the group of grand old men of the Lawrence faculty in the late eighties I think of the words of a distinguished physician, "there is no more potent antidote to the corroding influence of mammon than the presence in a community of a body of men devoted to science, living for investigation, and caring nothing for the lust of the eyes and the pride of life."

It is a secondary matter whether the endowments are great or small, the equipments palatial or humble; the fate of an institution rests not on these; the inherent vital elements, which transcend all material interests, which may give to a school glory and renown in their absence, and lacking which, all the pride, pomp and circumstance are vain—this vitalizing element, I say, lies in the men who work in its halls and in the ideals which they chersh and teach. "With influence there is life, without it there is none;" an academical system without the personal influence of teachers upon pupils, is an arctic winter; it will create an ice-bound, petrified, cast-iron university and nothing else.

One of the striking features of the college life at Lawrence in my day was the presence, and active functioning of the four literary societies; Phœnix, Philalathean, Lawrean and Athena. These societies were the center of the social and literary life of the university. Without them college life would have been very stale and dull indeed. They furnished the rivalry which is so essential to a lively interest in university affairs. Each society tried to excel the other in the skill and ability of its debaters, orators and musicians; the scholarship and athletic prowess of its members, the cleverness of its entertainments. The public and parliamentary training which future ministers, lawyers and politicians received in presiding over meetings; in public debate, in impromptu discussion and in declamation, was of inestimable value to them; and I fear is almost entirely lacking in the modern fraternity system. The influence, by precept and example of the older members on the younger, was a vital thing; to be felt throughout life. I might say in passing that the men who exerted the greatest influence over many of us in our "prep" days, men who were my college ideals, were our distinguished toastmaster and his college chum, Harry Miles.

One might spend hours relating interesting anecdotes, connected with the lives and activities of such men as Prof. Jones and Prof. Foye and Prof. Underwood. As Jim Bonham was taking leave of Prof. Jones on commencement day, 1889, he said with tears in his voice, "Professor, I am indebted to you for all I know." "Pray do not mention such a trifle," was the reply. On another occasion during one of the interesting sessions of the senior class in Evidences of Christianity, a bright student with radical and very liberal views asked Dr. Raymond if it were not a fact that most of the troubles in this country were due to the three P's; the Pulpit, the Press and the Politician. The doctor replied that it was a difficult question to answer, but that he was sure that the trouble could not be cured by the three A's; the Atheist, the Agitator and the Anarchist.

When Dr. Jas Reeve was a lad of seven he happened to be sitting in his father's reception room when a funeral procession passed by. "Father, what is that?" "That," my son, "is a mistake in diagnosis."

The one enduring and endearing bond between the old university and the new college is our beloved librarian, Zelia Anne Smith. God bless her! May she live to be a hundred! She is an institution all by herself, and has made everyone of us members of her faculty, her devoted constituency.

TOAST BY HERBERT ALLEN SAWYER '09

Mr. Toastmaster; Ladies and Gentlemen: I do not consider it unlucky because it is thirteen years this June since I graduated from Lawrence College. Quite to the contrary it is a great joy and a deep privilege to be present and to participate in this, the Seventy-fifth Anniversary of Lawrence College. The Toastmaster has asked me to speak for that notable decade, the first of the twentieth century, 1900-1910, and when I call to mind the renowned members of the faculty and the eminent graduates of that period, I am reminded of the man that had but one story for all occasions. It was his "gun" story and he was always skillful in finding a point of contact that would enable him to tell his pet and only story. But on this particular occasion, try as hard as he could, he found no opening for his story. At last in desperation resolved to have his part in the round of yarns, he brought his foot down on the floor with a resounding crash and exploded with the words, "That reminds me of my gun story." I am not in that position this evening for when we survey together the "Lawrence of Treat and Corkhill, the Lawrence of Nuzum and Stevens," it is time alone that would compel us to terminate our tribute.

The Lawrence of 1922 is very different from the Lawrence of 1905-1909. Still I doubt whether the appreciation of and love for the college is any stronger today on the part of its students than it was for those of that period. True, we did not have Brokaw or Peabody Halls or the Memorial Chapel; the student body and faculty were about one half as large as at present; the social, fraternal, scholastic and religious life of the college has found many new ways of expressing itself and new organizations in which to function, all, in accord with the demands of the age.

From the class-rooms, where they poured out the treasures of mind and heart, some of those splendid inspired and inspiring souls have passed on, called by a higher power to the great University above. We can never forget their patience and their devotion to the task of moulding the youth that entered their presence from year to year. For in retrospect it seems that we derived even more from the spirit and life of our teachers than from the accruing of facts and the memorization of data. They taught us how to live and what to live for. What greater contribution could they make? It should not be remarkable that a host of young men and women have left the halls of Lawrence to attain worth-while success. If they were true to the teaching and the ideals they received here, they could not do otherwise. Into all the legitimate professions and arts and trades they have entered. They had what the world needed—trained minds, warm hearts and the spirit of service. All honor and praise to the faculty of our decade who spared not themselves that we might carry on the best of the age.

Lawrence has made marvellous progress during the past thirteen years. On every side we see the results of the purposeful and statesmanlike leadership of our beloved President, the untiring efforts in behalf of Christian education on the part of a consecrated faculty and the whole-hearted devotion of a Board of Trustees. If I should speak any word of criticism, it would be to the Alumni, who deeply engrossed in their own work, sometimes seem indifferent to the debt of gratitude they owe their Alma Mater. Probably the time will never come when all the actual needs of Lawrence will be supplied. The increasing body of Alumni can show their appreciation of their college by their return at class reunions and on other occasions, by their subscription to the 'Lawrence Alumnus' and the yearly payment of dues, by their gifts to endowment funds and by their constant and abiding interest in their Alma Mater. Loyalty to college should transcend loyalty to class or fraternity.

The Yale University Alumni Association has devised a plan that in practice has much to commend it. Every class is thoroughly organized and an annual free-will offering is made through the class organization to the University. The names and the amounts and the class totals are printed in the annual reports.

I believe this college has a bright and most useful future before it. One can well doubt if any college in America has contributed more to the high moral and spiritual ideals and to Christian education in proportion to the gifts entrusted to her, than Lawrence. Through all the years the forward looking youth from the great northern empire of Wisconsin, have come with bright eyes and thirsty minds and eager, warm hearts to attain that wider outlook and that deeper appreciation of God and His world and His children. And they have not come in vain. Lawrence stands as a part of that mighty force within America making for a purer, better and nobler world. John Oxenham asks, "To whom shall the world henceforth belong?" and he finds the answer in these words:

To the Great Hearts—the Strong,
Who will suffer no wrong,
And where they find evil redress it.
To the men of Good Fame
Who everything claim—
This world and the next—in their Master's great name;
To these shall the world henceforth belong,
And they shall go up and possess it;
Overmuch, overlong, has the world suffered wrong,
We are here by God's help to redress it.
May this ever be the spirit and task of Lawrence.

From the President's Report for 1921-1922

To the Trustees:

There is submitted herewith the Annual Report prescribed by the By-Laws together with certain recommendations which are commended to the Trustees and their appropriate committees.

It is a matter of interest that it is seventy-five years ago that the first legally constituted Board of Trustees of Lawrence College held its first meeting. A charter had been secured from the territorial legislature which was approved by Henry Dodge, Governor, on January 15, 1847. This charter contains some interesting features among them being the provision that the trustees are empowered to hold and convey property, providing "always that the annual income shall not exceed ten thousand dollars," a striking illustration of how men's ideas of higher education have developed in three quarters of a century. There is also the provision that the Board of Trustees shall hold its first meeting at Fond du Lac within six months of the passage of the act. It would be very interesting if we had a record of this first meeting of the trustees which unfortunately we have not. There is, however, an account of a meeting of the Board held about this time and written by a daughter of one of the members which indicates the personal sacrifice of these noble men in launching the new enterprise. She says: "They gathered at my father's home in Oshkosh, for my father, S. M. Stone, was a preacher in charge of the Winnebago Circuit which embraced the whole county.

There on the lake shore, in a log parsonage, ten by twenty feet were the inside dimensions of the same, those noble, self-sacrificing men planned for the institution before there was a tree cut in Appleton, and not only planned but divided their little store to start the wheel rolling. My father at that time gave $100.00 which was a fifth of all his earthly possessions, and the rest did likewise." Other statements of the sacrifices of these first trustees have come down to us. Thus Rev. Wm. Sampson, presiding elder of the district writes in his diary; "In order to carry forward the work I found it necessary to dispose of my property in the City of Fond du Lac where I owned a dwelling, two lots and thirty acres, also one hundred and twenty acres of timber land two miles north of the west side of the lake. As money was close I had to sell at a great sacrifice, but risked all, reputation and property on the success of Lawrence University." We also find in the early records, that to secure the $10,000 required by Mr. Lawrence, Hon. Mason C. Darling, president of the Board of Trustees, mortgaged his property for $3,000 and turned it into the treasury of the new school. Such heroism and self-sacrifice as was displayed by the first trustees of Lawrence could but be seed cast upon the waters which would find the return in a great institution of learning whose benefits would be shared by thousands of youth in the years to come. It was doubtless true that in these early years of struggle, the trustees never dreamed of what we see today. but it is well for us, their successors, to remember their nobility of spirit and realize that we hold a sacred trust, a trust consecrated by a devotion and willingness to sacrifice seldom equalled even in the history of education. If we today had their enthusiasm and self-denial, it would not be long before Lawrence would be one of the greatest institutions in the land.

The seventy-five years that have elapsed since the first meeting of the Board of Trustees of Lawrence College have witnessed the most remarkable changes in education. There was not at that time an institution of higher learning in the United States that had as large a student attendance, as good an equipment, or offered as advanced courses or so large a number as does Lawrence today. This leads us at this anniversary occasion to wonder what Lawrence will have become when seventy-five years more shall roll round. One thing is certain; with the growth in population and wealth in northern Wisconsin the demands on the institution will steadily increase and the college's services to the state and nation will multiply many fold.

The last year has been a satisfactory and successful one. There has been but little sickness in the faculty, and most of the new teachers have done a high grade of work. We shall have but two changes the coming year but several new teachers will be added to take care of the increasing attendance. Dr. Louis Baker who has been in France the past two years, will return as the head of the Modern Language department, Dr. Foster who is working in the British Museum will again take up her work in September. Miss Daisy Ingold who has been an instructor in the Latin department has resigned and Dr. Mary Trowbridge of the University of Illinois has been employed to take her place. Two of our recent graduates have been secured to help in the departments of Commerce and of Public Speaking.

The attendance of students has been the largest in our history. Eight hundred and fifty-seven (857) have enrolled in the college of Liberal Arts and 493 in the Conservatory of Music. The Freshman class numbers a few more than 390. These students come from sixty-three Wisconsin counties, the five largest groups being from Outagamie, Racine, Winnebago and Marinette counties. There are students from the following states: Michigan, No. Dakota, Illinois, Minnesota, Indiana, Delaware, Idaho, Tenn., California, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Washington, South Dakota, Arkansas, Iowa, and of course Wisconsin. We also have students from the following foreign countries: China, Formosa, Korea, Australia, Burma, Ireland, France, Canada, South America, and the Hawaiian Islands. The scholastic work of the students has shown improvements and we have had fewer dropped because of failures than in several years previous. We have been very successful in intercollegiate activities. We again won the state championship in football, of six intercollegiate debates we won five. We won the state contest in oratory, and the eastern divisional conference consisting of representatives of the colleges in the states between the Mississippi river and the Allegheny mountains. We also won the Rhodes scholarship and Mr. L. Kevill Larson of the class of '21 will represent Wisconsin at Oxford for the next three years.

We have done an unusual large amount of repairs and made some important additions during the year. Needing more recitation rooms, we lowered the windows in the basement of Recitation Hall, cemented the floors and built three fine recitation rooms, a large room for the Lawrentian, a toilet room for men, a store room, and a carpenter shop. This makes a very important addition to our facilities and cost about $5,600. We also made some important changes at Brokaw Hall, constructing a suite of rooms for the dean, adding three rooms for students, rebuilding the stairways, and redecorating the building, the whole costing about $3,000. The heating plant was overhauled, thermostat valves placed on all the buildings to control the temperature, and automatic draft regulator installed and other changes made at a cost of about $5,500. Russell Sage was painted and redecorated both inside and out and this was in part true of Ormsby Hall. There have also been important improvements made on the athletic field. A field house about 45 ft. by 20 was erected, provided with dressing rooms, lockers, shower baths and waiting room. It is greatly appreciated by students participating in field sports. The running track has been rebuilt, a fence and additional bleachers erected, and other changes made, the cost being $3,000. We have spent between $20,000 and $23,000 in these and other improvements, not including the adding of a residence called the Henbest house to the Conservatory of Music plant.

There have also been substantial additions made to our educational equipment. Dr. Warner of the department of physics has employed a student who is an expert mechanic to make apparatus for his department. This young man has made at an expense for labor and material of about $800 what it would cost us $3,000 to purchase of the firms which sell these instruments. Moreover, his workmanship is as good as that found in the best purchased apparatus. There has also been a complete radio outfit added to the physics department. Considerable apparatus has been added to the other departments of science. A considerable quantity of specimens of various kinds has been added to the museum, and substantial additions have been added to the library.

There is great need of an extension of our plant. We should have at once more room for our laboratories, as our Science Hall is too small for our present atendance. It must either be enlarged, or a new building must be erected which will provide for much needed additional recitation rooms and take care of some of our science work, say the department of Chemistry. We also need a new gymnasium, as the present building is outgrown.

The dormitories have this year been much crowded. We have added an additional residence for girls to our dormitory accomodations. This gives us two large dormitories and four small ones for the young women. We can take care of about 375 persons in these buildings. At the beginning of the year every room was taken and quite a number of persons were turned away because of lack of accomodations. The small dormitories are not at all popular with the girls. We need another dormitory with accomodations for 125 girls. If it were constructed with many private baths, we could get $350 per boarder which would make a fair return on the cost of erection. Brokaw Hall, our only home for boys, takes care of 135 students. It is altogether too small to meet the demand. The past year has witnessed a remarkable change at Brokaw, owing to the excellent work of Prof. Ingler who has charge of the Hall. He has transformed it from considerable of a rough house to an orderly, well behaved community where good work is being done. We should have additional dormitory accomodations for men.

The past year the dormitories have paid about 6 per cent on the investment. Our income has been about $128,000, and our expenses will be about $102,000. This will leave us a profit of approximately $26,000.

The Conservatory of Music has had a prosperous year under the direction of Dean Waterman. The total enrollment has been 493. We have had 17 teachers working in the department. There have been some very fine musical organizations developed, two of which deserve special mention. The Lawrence Choir is composed of 100 voices and is the finest musical organization ever produced within the college.

The Fullenwider String Quartette is also an exceptionally fine organization. The Lawrence Glee club won much praise on its annual tour. Owing to the increased attendance, we this year used a residence adjoining the Conservatory on the east for studio and practice purposes. We very much need a new plant for this department and we are trying to get the Juillard Foundation to do this for us. The expenses of the conservatory to date have been about $42,945 and its income $51,809, leaving a profit of about $9,000.

The first thing to report upon in relation to our finances is the effort we are making to raise $600,000, including the $200,000 conditionally subscribed by the General Education Board. We have been making a quiet campaign by what is called the gum shoe method. Since our meeting a year ago we have raised a little more than $80,000. During the summer, five of our professors worked for about eight weeks, securing about $12,000. We also had the Rev. J. S. Lean and the Rev. Enoch Perry in the field for about three months each and they secured about $8,000. Last September we employed Rev. Samuel Cookson, who graduated last year, to canvas the alumni and old students. He has been very successful securing subscriptions amounting to more than $50,000. Mr. Kevill Larson has been employed in the same way since November. We have yet to secure about $25,000 to meet the condition of the General Education Board, and cover the expense of the campaign. We are too near the goal to fail. We hope to have this largely pledged by the next meeting of the trustees. We are required to secure not only $400,000, but to raise our indebtedness of $47,000. This was reduced to $28,000 in the last report of the treasurer. We believe the present year will show a profit of several thousand dollars, partially due to the gift of $10,000 this year towards running expenses from the General Education Board, and the fact that the Carnegie Corporation has paid interest on its subscription of $75,000 without waiting for the condition to be met. Our surplus together with a couple of bequests which have been received will take care of our indebtedness. The increase of tuition, the very large attendance, and the gifts for current expenses received, will make this an especially successful year financially.

We have had some bequests this year of interest. Mrs. John Edwards bequeathed $2,500 to Lawrence and Judge R. D. Marshall, a former student, left a part of his estate to us at the death of his wife. One of the executors thinks that we shall realize from $125,000 to $150,000 from this gift.

Some Achievements of Lawrence in 1921-1922

1. Lawrence won the Rhodes Scholarship for Wisconsin to Oxford University in competition with the University of Wisconsin, all the other colleges of the state, and representatives from Wisconsin studying in institutions in other states. Mr. Kevill Larson, '20, was the successful candidate.

2. Lawrence won the state foot-ball championship as it did the year previous.

The World War

There was never a land too distant
Nor ever a way too wide,
But some man's mind, insistent,
Reached out to the other side.
They cleared the way, these heroes for the march of future years:
The march was civilization—and they were its pioneers."

Who Am I?
"I am the same brown-eyed Susan—I mean Marian—who came from Green Lake, Wisconsin, into Lawrence Academy in 1906. Long ago? Yes, but I am younger now.
Doc Sammy says, "What has bin a doin?" In 1911 when my classmates were leaving Lawrence, I was graduated from Northwestern University School of Oratory. After that I taught two years, in the State University of Iowa, and in McKendree College. Then I became hungry again and returned to Lawrence to be fed. In 1915 Lawrence conferred the M. A. degree, after I had spent three quarters at Chicago U. The degree seems to stick, although Professor Treat forgot to put my "collar" on. After teaching in New London high school four years, I came to Platteville Normal where I teach English and serve as Dean of Women.
How do you spend your summers, I wonder. I sometimes give entertainments, sometimes teach, sometimes stay at home. In the summer of 1919, I had a glorious vacation in the Rocky Mountains of Colorado. When I am married (joke!) the ceremony will be performed in the Bridal Chamber of the Cave of the Winds, or some similar place."
